MON ANGE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Where'er I go, whatever path I take,
To journey thro' this world of care and strife,
Command me; and forever for thy sake
I'll be obedient. If to sacrifice my life
To prove devotion, let the stern behest
Be uttered, and then who may may kill,
And by my urging punish much, lest
I'd not seem obedient still.

Dear Allie, destined soon to be mine own,
What fonder title than to call you dear?
To womanly grace your fairy form has grown,
That saddest reflex of an anxious tear.
Protection to thee will I e'er accord,
Love, and esteem be, darling, ever thine.
Haste, happy day, that joy will much afford
To press thee to my heart, dear bride of mine.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

BASKING IN THE SUNSHINE.

Rhoda was conveyed by her father and brother to their camp, which was now on the opposite side of Shepley Heath to that where it was formerly planted. It had very much diminished in size and importance since Gideon's revolt. The re-appearing of Rhoda among them, after the reports of all she had suffered from Gideon, called forth the warmest feelings of the impulsive people. They gathered about her like swarms of bees as she moved along to her father's tent, and were ready to kiss the turf that her feet trode. With a lofty dignity of demeanor and a wild grace, she held out her hands right and left to one and to another, and uttered pleasing expressions of recognition, inquiring after healths and family welfare. She promised to devote herself to them all, and they pledged themselves to stand by her in weal and woe. Every one appeared to increase the attachment of the people, for they were proud of her beauty, proud of her right royal behavior, and full of pity for her misfortunes. Soon Gideon's tribe, leaving Gideon buried among the wilds of Dartmoor, came traveling from thence, and spread their tents near Falkland's. Then there was a great meeting of gipsey chiefs from different parts of the kingdom—met to deliberate about Gideon's money, which he had lodged in different banks in various towns that he had traveled through. Some of the chiefs were opposed to Rhoda having any part in it, she having been divorced by gipsey law. She pleaded her own cause before them with great ability and much feeling, and in the end the majority agreed that half the money should be hers, the other half should be divided as the chiefs deemed best among the people of Falkland's tribe and his own, for he had left no will, and no immediate relations. This business amicably settled, and a great feast following after for the complete reconcilement of the hostile tribes, Rhoda occupied an important and prominent position, which she seemed fully and very highly to appreciate. Alf managed to communicate with her from time to time, and hope once more shone in her enchanting eyes, and played about her ruddy, dimpled mouth. She knew that he had not married Miss Forrester, and now pledged his word that he never would marry her or any other except Rhoda. She received word from him that he was singing every day before large audiences, that he had many more engagements than he could fulfill, that his voice was everywhere praised, and his power on the stage was not confined to singing merely. He sent her beautiful presents, and continually desired her to remember him, and remain true to him. Rhoda and Alf did not write to each other. Alf could by this time handle the pen very fairly, but she was sadly deficient in elementary education, and both adopted the native plan of confidential messengers—gipsies—who came and went as stealthily as if they had been phantoms, and were strictly accurate in their reports—so much so as sometimes to say rather more than Alf desired, as when they reported meeting him surrounded by gay society, looking perfectly well and happy, as if there were no Rhoda left in the tent. She now and then fretted—as women will, be they queens or not—jealous of the pleasing pictures her messengers drew of Alf; she had rather they were less pleasing. But these were exceptional moods. Generally she was rejoiced to know that he was prospering. Falkland, too, was in constant communication with his foster son. He was the regular channel through which, during a year, the rising artiste made his selections of singers and performers of all kinds from the wandering tribes. How many young men were thus brought out of obscurity was only known to three, Alf, Falkland and Gough, Petrovitch's executor. They were certainly many in number, and amongst them are several now well known, including singers, instrumental and dramatic performers on the stage or the circus, and musical composers. Pecuniary assistance, where necessary to aid in bringing out these young men, was freely afforded, according as Alf directed, through Gough, who had the administrations of the fund expressly provided for the purpose in the will of the Tartan gipsey musical director.

Alf's "Ethiopian" troupe alone, that which was the foundation of the present flourishing and numerous Ethiopian bands which enjoy so large a share of popularity, was chiefly composed of gipsies. The name "Ethiopian" has been by generations after generations of a large number of gipsies applied to themselves long before "nigger" bands were thought of; and the original "Ethiopians" were gipsies disguised, concealing their despised name of gipsies, and equally concealing their true origin, while seeking an open field for their high artistic abilities. Alf was far from confining his own genius to the Ethiopian troupe that the Tartan professor had founded. He had not merely the gift of melody, of creating powerful effects by his splendid voice in song tunes and gipsey choruses, he possessed also the "gift of harmony," and his course was very rapid and very brilliant. As Signor Julio—though that was not his actual artistic designation, but one I think best to substitute for it—he became one of the favorites of the fashionable world, and his wonderful performances, as versatile as they were beautiful and effective, were the talk of the town.

"Who is he? Where has he received his musical training?"

These were questions flying about, and the only answer rather excited than satisfied public curiosity.

"O, you know that strange being, Alexis Petrovitch. This is one of his young aspirants. Who, or what they are, is best known to themselves. But it is perfectly certain that if there was ever a professor who knew a good voice when he heard it, or who could recognize a musical genius when he heard one, that was Professor Petrovitch."

Rhoda had not seen Alf for two months while he was working his way upward, when he suddenly appeared in the camp of his foster father—came not as in the old days, but in the fashionable dress, and with the general style of appearance of his new professional position. Two of the Ethiopian troupe accompanied him, and all was gaiety in the camp while they stayed. Thus Alf and Rhoda met, and many a sweet rosy dream of the future floated about the re-united gipsey lovers, as they lingered by the roadside, under the shadow of the tall, leafy screen of the hedgerows, or crossed the heathery ridge, where the free air blew keen and life inspiring; or rested in the rear of the tents, looking on the amusements of the tribe, while mirthful music sounded, and groups of dancers went through their graceful and spirited performances as only gipsies can. Let those who despise the amusements of the camp say where is the toiling class among us who recreate themselves in a better fashion. Thousands and ten thousands of our working population are coarser in manners, more brutish in their enjoyments, more ignorant and offensive in language than the gipsies, always excepting the lowest orders of that people who, in fact, are mostly not gipsies at all, or dreadfully mixed, as a gipsey once said, "with our roughs and tramps and thieves, who like to avail themselves, when they can, of the gipsey caravans and tents." But there is really nothing in common between this interesting, ancient named race and the vile scum of our population. The two may accidentally seem to mingle, but the superior gipsies intensely despise our barbarous offscourings and shun all contact with them. And most of the undoubted gipsies of the rougher sort would eagerly seize opportunities to improve themselves and their families if they had a fair chance. But long ages of contempt and persecution have left dark traces in the character of the race which may not be quickly effaced. But let us hope that that time is coming soon when we shall educate their children freely and well, and treat the people with the respect due to their ancient and mysterious origin, and their fine natural endowments. Alf and Rhoda were now very happy. They met with rapture; they had certainly no part, but it was to meet again, for he came again and again, and at every meeting gave better and still better assurances of prosperity, and of his increasing power to assist his brother gipsies. Five months after Petrovitch's death, Alf became an operatic singer, and his success was never doubtful for a moment. A messenger arrived daily to Rhoda and Falkland reporting his progress, and then it was that Alf insisted on the gipsey queen and her father making a special visit to be present at the opera on a night when he was to undertake a more important part than had yet been intrusted to him. After a serious conference, held in Falkland's tent, it was resolved that the family should go. It may be thought that they could hardly be presentable in such a place, but that would be quite a mistake. They had dressed for many parts, each and all of them, during their strange lives. Here let me say once more that true gipsies are born actors and actresses. There is more than a probability that the greatest actor the world has ever seen—Edmund Kean—was of gipsey blood, and gipsey genius; his origin cannot be traced. He was a strolling singer, tumbler, dancer, actor, rider and what not, before he burst upon the astonished world as an actor of unparalleled power, and the strangest witchery. Was it not the wonderful gipsey eye that all his biographers describe as so amazing in its fire and tragic in expression? The wild, inimitable, amazing inspiration that all the world has recognized in Bunyan, and in Kean, I venture to say, is different in its essence from all other geniuses. There is nothing else like it, except in other gipsey artists.

The reader who doubts the origin of Kean is recommended to study his life thoughtfully—or what is known of that erratic career—and try to find where Kean had vanished during three years of his early maturity—which three years are wholly veiled in darkness. Where was he? Dare I suggest that he was with his kindred race—that great race, if they only knew their proper place in the world. Well, the chief of the Falkland tribe, with his whole family, prepared, with the utmost care, for a visit to the English opera, where Alf was to appear on the stage in a well known part, which would afford him full scope for the exercise of his admirable tenor voice, and rare dramatic powers. They had always known how to spend largely on personal display when that was required, but now money was of no object at all, and taste was developed—and that of no mean order—and with scarcely any characteristic features of incongruity. Falkland's tent was half filled with the purchases that had been made for their visit by Alf, and sent down to Shepley in installments. It would have been highly amusing if one could only have looked in to see the finery arranged, and re-arranged and studied and restudied by those simple folk. A long time these preliminaries occupied, but at last it was all settled, and the costumes of the family gave immense satisfaction to themselves and those who were priviliged to behold them on their own domains. Alf had secured a second floor furnished for their use in the Haymarket, and thither, with the usual stealthiness of all gipsey movements, they arrived, one by one, without exciting the least attention, it being understood that the rooms were taken for people connected in some way with theatricals. Here Becca and her daughter dressed before a large pier glass in one room, assisted by two of the cleverest women of the tribe, while Falkland and his eldest son submitted their wild, untrimmed locks to the sheers, and donned habiliments suited for opera stalls. They then met in the furnished sitting room, with an odd mixture of amusement, self admiration and wonder. The transformation was complete. They looked a dark, swarthy, handsome foreign family—they might be Spanish, or Italian, or Asiatic. Rhoda's towering figure was truly magnificent, in a purple velvet robe, and mantilla veil of black lace. Jewels flashed in her lustrous hair and on her bosom, and her fingers were covered in curious rings, which she made no attempt to conceal. Becca Falkland was equally effective in clouds of black lace, with strange looking ornaments. Though verging on fifty, and of essentially sorceress style of appearance, her features were, in their way, as fine as her daughter's, regular and chiseled. She had lost much of the terrible gloom that her son Absolon's fate had cast over her ardent nature, and, although still a profound and mystical sadness was perceivable, yet she looked rather striking and grand than repulsive. It is not true that all gipsey elderly women are ugly. Alf had sent a cab for the women, and Gough—who was full of curiosity to behold Alf's marvelous gipsey queen and her mother—met them at the entrance to the opera, and conducted them to a small private box near the stage, where they at once sought the shade of the half drawn curtains. Falkland and his son soon after appeared below in seats close to the orchestra. Alf was walking on air that night. His joyous, ardent temperament lifted him above all difficulties, all fears. He sang as if inspired. The passion of his countenance and manner greatly assisted the effect of the superb tones that rolled from his heaving chest, and filled every corner of the edifice. Rhoda's presence carried him beyond himself, and when he finished, amid a storm of applause, the principal charm of it all was that she heard it. It was, too, an immense delight to see his chief and foster father and one of his foster brothers reflecting his own joy; and at a little distance, in the pit, there was a group of his old companions of the camp, their faces all radiant with unbounded admiration, and their hands and feet actively engaged in producing the utmost possible amount of noisy encouragement. Alf could not go much beyond this. All he craved in life was present this glorious night. His brain was giddy with joy, and amidst it all there sat the gipsey queen herself, in Alf's eyes the most beautiful woman that ever breathed, and she was to be his own, his wife, for what cared he for the warnings that Becca had now and then whispered in his ear—warnings of those bigoted and black hearted gipsies who had listened to Gideon and old Nathan, and still clung to the old cruel customs—believed in the sacrifice of the horse, and threatened Rhoda with death if she married again.

CHAPTER XL.

BASIL'S NEW DESIGN.

After the terrible communication made to her by the sailors of the lost Guernsey boat, Catherine crossed the sands to the village, with wavering step and frightened face, but soon stopped short, her agitation increasing as Mr. Phillips came towards her, his flushed air and troubled visage instantly informing her that he, too, was the bearer of bad news. He was not the best man in the world to have been entrusted with such an errand. Mrs. Wynne had charged him to be careful what he said to her, not to lead her to think that Oliver was in any immediate danger, but rather to support her hopes, and only say that he had met with an accident and wished to see her as soon as possible. Yet it did not make much difference his blurting out the real truth, after what Dowlands had told her.

"My dear girl, I am come to fetch you." She was always treated by the Phillipses exactly as one of themselves, her money made not a bit of difference in their homely manners.

"Who sent you?"

"Mrs. Wynne. You're surprised, of course; she's had to be telegraphed down from Heath House to Ellbrook Hamlet; you know that's five miles out of Exeter. She's there now, and her poor son, Oliver, who wants to see you, as soon as ever you can get there."

Her lips white and quivering she faintly asked:—"Do you know why he came down from London?"

"I don't at all—I believe to see you."

"To see me?"

She pressed her hand on her heaving bosom, whose secret pride still strove with true affection.

"Why should he come to see me?"

"That is not for me to say, my dear. Come down he did and Captain Holmes met him, and they went out shooting."

"Don't tell me more, Mr. Phillips, not just now."

She dropped on the sands in a sitting posture, and looked very pale. Thinking she was going to faint, he shouted to "Lizzie," whom he saw just parting from the sailors.

"I shall be better in a minute or two," Catherine said faintly. "Mr. Phillips, I've heard who shot Oliver."

"Who told you, then?"

"Those men you see over there. Will you please go and speak to them, and give them a sovereign each for me. Poor fellows, they have been out in the gale and lost their vessel, and one of the crew is drowned. I cannot tell you all, but will you please leave me here, and go and speak to them; perhaps they will tell you more than they have told me. O, Mr. Phillips!" she exclaimed in a broken voice, "I am afraid that he whom we all thought so highly of—you and Mrs. Phillips and Lizzie and I—has been a dreadfully wicked man, and a cruel enemy to his brother. But do please go and hear all you can from those sailors and reward them, and send Lizzie to me."

In another half hour Catherine was on her way to Oliver. With what thoughts of tenderness and compunction?—with what new deeps of feeling broken up?—with what self misgivings and regrets?—and with what new strength coming to her as yet untried girlish heart. The short night journey in the train gave her time to rally her thoughts and prepare herself to meet her perhaps dying cousin. Would he have sent for her had he been as guilty as Basil had represented? Light had dawned upon her; the motives of Basil in misrepresenting Oliver became so far revealed to her that she recognized their mercenary, untruthful nature, and deeply blamed herself for having so readily listened to the slandering tongue. Her proud resentment she now deplored, and the stubborn silence with which she had repelled Oliver was bitterly repented of. A little poetical miscellany that he had given her at Heath House—a favorite little companion that she constantly carried about with her—was unconsciously opened by her under the gaslight of the first class compartment, and with a pang that was indescribable she suffered her eyes to rest on these lines:—

How many o'er us at this very hour
Do frame a life-long trouble for ourselves,
By taking true as false and false as true,
Here in the narrow twilight of this world.

A life-long trouble indeed for her if Oliver died—a trouble not only of grief, but also of bitter self blame.

"For I have treated Oliver as false, and accepted for weeks the designing attentions of his slanderer as true."

Mr. Phillips was very silent during the journey, the sailor's revelations of the dreadful words and behavior of Captain Holmes in his peril on the sea having strongly impressed him, yet he did not like to talk of the worst aspect of the case to Catherine lest she should break down and be ill—of which he was horribly apprehensive—before they got to their destination. But she abruptly questioned him, and he could not help saying:—

"I believe now that Captain Holmes has been a foolin' of us all for his own interest. But there, he'd deceive a'most Beelzebub himself, I never met his equal; no, my dear, I don't now think there's been an ounce of truth in all his smooth palaver that he's persuaded me to listen to, I don't really. It do look queer that directly Oliver comes down, and before he's had a chance of a word with you, this trouble happens."

Catherine alluded tremblingly to "dreadful words that the sailors spoke," but Lizzie begged her to try and forget them, and told her that she ought not to dwell upon them. It was quite sad enough to think of such a terrible accident without conjuring up worse of Captain Holmes. Lizzie grew quite hot in his defence. Then Catherine relapsed into silence which lasted until the train shot into the station. Her eyes had again rested on the open page in the cherished little volume that bore her name on the title page in Oliver's dear writing. The lines were by the fine old Scottish poet Dunbar:—

Wealth, worldly glare, and rich array
Are all but thorns laid in the way;
Covered with flowers laid in a train,
All earthly joy returns in pain.

Came never yet May so fresh and green
But January came also wild and keen.
Was never such drought but once came rain;
All earthly joy returns in pain.

"Ah, that is true enough. I can now enter into the old poet's meaning. How joyful, how happy was I at Heath House when I thought that Oliver loved me. I have wealth and rich array, but what am I the better for it.

'All earthly joy returns in pain.'

"I was more at peace at school when I had no idea of being rich, and when I wore nothing but cotton and alpaca, and a cheap silk dress on Sundays. I've had my May, and now is come my 'January,' wild and keen."

Self-possessed, and naturally always self-repressed—undemonstrative—but now moving as it were in a trance—a trance in which thought is intensely active—Catherine urged Mr. Phillips to lose not a minute, but engage a carriage of some kind to carry her at once from the Exeter station on to Hillbrook. He and Lizzie counselled a brief rest and refreshment at home before proceeding, but her look of pathetic entreaty was enough, and Lizzie and she were quickly on the Hillbrook road.

"If I am too late?" this was her agonizing fear, which increased as the distance between her and Oliver diminished; and when the inn was in sight, Catherine flung herself sobbing on Lizzie's breast.

"Have courage, dear, he may be better than you imagine. Come, you must be strong now for his sake. It won't do for you to give way; I shall scold you if you do."

This true friend supported Catherine in her strong arms, and cheered her with her own firm and cheerful heart, almost carrying her into the house, where Mrs. Wynne received her with great emotion, and the two mingled their tears together.

"You cannot see him for some hours, darling Catherine, but I have promised him that you shall as soon as the surgeon will give us leave."

"But will he recover?"

Her life seemed to hang on the answer. Mrs. Wynne could not trust herself to speak, but turned her face away.

"Dear aunt, for pity's sake tell me truth!"

"It may be—it may not be. He is in God's hands. We must wait and see."

"Nay, tell me the truth. I will know. Can he recover—is it possible?"

"The surgeons thinks not."

Catherine stood still with fingers twisting on her bosom. She looked upwards and fell upon her knees. Lizzie was beside her in a moment.

"Catherine—Catherine, you must be more firm. Dear Kate, lean on me. There may yet be hope."

"I have none," said Mrs. Wynne.

"But you are not a surgeon," said Lizzie, sharply. "You ought to have hope, both of you, and, at the same time submit yourselves to the will of Heaven, whatever that may be."

"I am glad to be here. I am thankful to be near him."

"To be sure you are. There have been unfortunate misunderstandings that ought to be cleared up, if it be possible. I hope you and your cousin may yet have plenty of time for thorough reconciliation."

"We have all been at cross purposes, I think, my dear," said Mrs. Wynne. "And that is very painful to reflect on now."

After Basil had been confronted with his brother, he sent a pencil note to Catherine by the landlord. She would not receive it or listen to it, but Lizzie opened it for her, and read a vehement request to be permitted to say a few parting words to Miss Ratcliffe.

"Tell him no—no!"

While the words were on her lips, his step sounded on the sanded passage outside, and he boldly entered. She rose to repel him with a spirit he had not deemed her capable of. Like most men of his kind, he was wholly incapable of discriminating the purer lights and shades of character. It never entered into his conception that beneath her soft, yielding, timorous manner there lurked a wealth of undeveloped power. He saw her now, with the soft blue eyes dilated and filled with such intensity of aversion and scorn, that he could scarcely believe that she was the shrinking, credulous, tender girl whose retiring charms he had half despised. Far more beautiful to his eyes she looked now, and his egregious, incurable vanity led him to rejoice that he had the power to move her to the exhibition of such unwonted spirit. Her delicate features were all rosy red—quivering with excitement—and her beautiful slight figure was drawn up to more than its usual height.

"Miss Ratcliffe, I cannot leave without asking you whether you believe me guiltless of what has been laid to my charge."

"Do not ask me, sir!"

"But I must ask you. I wish to be satisfied on this point. Your opinion is of great moment to me."

"Captain Holmes!" exclaimed Lizzie Phillips, not unkindly, yet decidedly. "You really ought not to make an appeal like this. Consider how impossible it is for her to know one way or the other."

Though Lizzie had always been so friendly to Basil, he regarded her not an atom more than any other plain-featured, obscure girl, destitute of fortune; and having no further hope in her good offices, he rudely desired her not to interfere between him and Miss Ratcliffe, brutally observing:—

"You have been many times too forward to interpose where you were not needed, and I have often been going to tell you so."

Now considering that her interposition had placed a thousand pounds in his pocket, and had tried to render him many other services, wholly disinterested on her part, this was tolerably cool. Lizzie felt the sting of his attack, but was too noble to resent it, otherwise than by saying:—

"Captain Holmes, I think you have been glad sometimes of my interference?"

"Not at all," he answered, roughly. "You have been in my way and hindered me when I wished to communicate with Miss Ratcliffe independent of you or your officious influence."

"You will have no more of that," she rejoined, with admirable temper.

"That is one comfort, at all events."

His manner to Lizzie was so rude, his ingratitude to her so obvious that Catherine could hardly contain her anger. She said emphatically:—

"My friend has only been too good to you, Captain Holmes, and so have all her family; but I begin to think that ingratitude is a part of your nature, for I know that your brother never deserved from you the slander you have heaped on him."

"And how have you discovered, pray, that anything I may have said of him has been slanderous?"

She answered, "I have not any certainty yet, but I shall have soon."

"Be not too sure of that."

"Oh, I am quite sure," she cried. "And I regret you ever shook my confidence in Oliver."

This was quite sufficient evidence for Basil of the depth and reality of her love for Oliver. How hateful he looked as that conviction overspread his features with envious and hateful expression. Not even the sight of his suffering and dying brother had changed his evil heart. He wished now—standing before the afflicted girl—he wished that he had aimed surer!

All the truth about Oliver's supposed repudiation of his engagement to Catherine—all the truth of Oliver's supposed base connexion with the unknown lady, of whom his grandmother in Bloomsbury wrote—all the truth of Oliver's apparent neglect of Catherine—had yet to be made known to her, and Basil did not like that by any means. Why he cared about it he could hardly tell; but with all its callousness he did somehow care about Catherine's opinion of him. He would have done anything to stand even moderately well in her sight—but he was too late to prevent the perfect understanding of his subtle treachery and falsehood. In a few hours she would think of him as the vilest man beneath the clouds. Still he reiterated the question that he came into her presence to ask:—

"Do you believe me guiltless of any intention to injure my brother?"

"I wish to believe so," was the utmost he could prevail on her to say. And then, breaking out of her habitual reticence, she exclaimed, in great agitation:—"Why do you torture me in this way? How do I know what you have done, or attempted? The sailors who arrested you expressed to me a shocking conviction of your guilt. They heard things you said when you were in extremity, fearing and expecting death, each moment, that passed by."

"Why I sent them to find you, and to inform you of what I had done accidentally."

"I know you did. I am quite aware of that. But they represent you as madly eager to escape."

"Because I dreaded the imputations that I see I am doomed to suffer under."

"But was such conduct manly, straightforward, courageous? I never understood before that Captain Holmes was cowardly." However, I will not be forced to dwell on all this. I have no right to be troubled by you, you have afflicted me enough. Pray stand aside, sir, and permit me to leave the room, if you will not."

She swept past him with consummate dignity, the more striking because such self-assertion was so unusual in her timid character. The effort cost her much, and Basil knew it, and hated the more his unoffending brother, to whom all her heart and soul were turning under the light of heaven, while he, Cain, accursed, cast out, detested, must go and wander alone.

"Alone—no, that he would not." A hot flush rushed to his brow. There was one who had roused strange new passions in his hardened breast—that one he would find now, if he hunted all England over. She should go with him to another land, where, in her society, he would spend and enjoy Catherine's magnificent gift. Yes, that was his next move, and he proceeded swiftly towards execution.

CHAPTER XLI.

HAPPINESS IN SORROW.

Oliver several times inquired if Miss Ratcliffe had come. He was told that she had not, until he chanced to hear her name spoken outside his door, and then he roused himself to say that he knew she was in the house, and he insisted upon being allowed to see her. His mother then brought her to the room. The smile with which he greeted her was indescribable—sudden, bright and sweet, it carried swift conviction to the proud heart which had cherished so intense a resentment against him—it at once told her that her bitterness had been unmerited, that his conscience was clear towards her. Then all her pride broke down and her genuine affection triumphed. That she must have deeply wounded him by her own unkindness pressed upon her thoughts; she felt unable to advance toward him, but covered her eyes and broke into a great passion of tears, such as she had never in her life indulged in until now. He called her by name over and over and stretched out his arms toward her. Presently she ran to him and kissed his bloodless brow and cheeks with fast flowing tears. His blanched hands pressed hers, and they gazed upon each other long and silently; then, in low tones of agony, she entreated:—

"Oliver, dear Oliver, try and live for me!"

"Do you love me, Catherine?"

"I do, indeed."

"Why have you forsaken me so long?"

"Falsehood has separated us," she answered.

"Basil's?"

"Yes."

"He has much to answer for. But I forgive him."

"Why did you come down to Exeter?"

"To try for a better understanding with you," he answered.

"For nothing else?"

"For nothing else."

"Dear Oliver, had I but known before you met your evil-minded brother how happy we might have been. But why did you not come down before?"

"I wrote to you long ago with all my heart and mind, and I got no answer."

"I have not received a line from you."

"I know, my mother had charge of that letter; she mislaid it, but I was in ignorance of that until a few hours before this fatal journey."

"Why did my aunt not inform you sooner, and why was I left in the dark?"

"My dear, she wrote to tell me of her misfortune, and strange to say, her letter was also mislaid by the charwoman of my chambers, who only found it just before I left London."

Mrs. Wynne had re-entered the chamber, and was listening to their mutual explanations. She now said:—

"I will tell you both the truth of the loss of Oliver's letter. It was not mislaid; I wrote an untruth to screen Basil. It was he who willfully destroyed it."

"I half suspected that," said Oliver.

Catherine now ventured to bring to light her secret grievance, which had produced so much bitter fruit.

"Tell me, Oliver, did you ever say to your brother that there was no engagement between us, none at all, none likely."

Never, never. I told my brother that I looked on you as my future wife. I warned him to avoid you, because his principles and conduct were unfit for association with any pure-minded woman."

"One thing more, if you can bear it?"

"Yes, yes. Hide nothing from me. Let me know all."

"Has there been a lady living in your grandmother's house in Bloomsbury, who has been a friend of yours?"

"A friend of Oliver's, my dear, what can you mean?" interposed Mrs. Wynne.

"Basil showed me part of a letter from Bloomsbury speaking of a lady who had been ill-treated by your son Oliver."

"By my son Basil, Catherine. I sent him that letter, which I had received from my mother in Bloomsbury—and he has turned it against Oliver, has he? He is capable of anything."

"Oh, Catherine, Catherine!" ejaculated Oliver, reproachfully. "How could you think so hardly of me. Did you not know me better? Was it possible for me to be such a man as that?"

"No, indeed, Oliver. That imputation against you really made me doubt Basil altogether. But I knew not what to make of it all. How could I understand?"

"Catherine," said Mrs. Wynne, "both you and I have been to blame. But you asked why you were kept in the dark? I was in the dark all along as to the reason of your coldness to Oliver, and your refusal to see him before you left London. How could I or he tell that you had been listening to Basil's falsehood. And after you came to Exeter I supposed that, although Oliver's first letter to you was destroyed, yet that he had addressed to you a second, and that you did not reply, because you wished to let us understand that you would be guided by your Belgravian trustee and marry some one of higher rank."

"How you wronged me in that, aunt. I never had a wish or thought away from here," and she bent her face over Oliver, and again imprinted a kiss on his death-like brow. "Forgive it all!" she said to him, her soft eyes pleading, loving, weeping.

Mrs. Wynne continued:—

"There was a lady in Bloomsbury whom Basil had brought from India, and has since deserted—left her sick, homeless, destitute. She is now in a work-house infirmary, but Oliver never saw her."

"Oh, say no more about it, aunt."

"We understand one another now," said Oliver, smiling and looking quite happy.

"Yes; but what a now for me! Oh, do try and recover for me!"

"I will try."

"Catherine must leave you now," said Mrs. Wynne.

"I cannot bear to let her go."

"And I cannot leave you without hope."

"Hope, then, my Catherine! Something whispers me that I shall live, although I thought otherwise when Basil was here. This happy meeting with you—this complete explanation has done me good, although the revelations you have both made of Basil have grieved me. But he is—what he is—and only a miracle could work his reformation. But Catherine is more to me than such a brother, and I have found my love once more."

To his mother Oliver then spoke brave and affectionate words, and assured her also that his present happiness would help him to live. And so it proved. After passing through a fortnight of extreme danger he began daily to improve.

AMONG THE NATURAL BEAUTIES OF IRELAND.

That well known manager and performer, Mons. La Thorne, recently left here for a trip to Europe, and on a trip of pleasure generally. The following account of his travels in Ireland will be read with interest by our numerous readers of all nationalities:—

DUBLIN, IRELAND, July 30th, 1869.

FRANK QUEEN.—DEAR SIR.—Having proceeded thus far on my journey, I propose to give you an account of my travels and the scenes I have witnessed. I left New York on Saturday, July 10th, in the fine national steamship, the Queen, and, after a pleasant passage of twelve days, landed in Queenstown, Ireland, which is a very lively little place, being the principal seaport town in Ireland. Queenstown is built on the side of a hill rising abruptly from the sea, and the streets rise in tiers one above another, having a very picturesque effect as you approach it from the sea; but, as there was very little there to interest me, I left on the same evening for the city of Cork, a distance of nine miles by rail, which took half an hour to accomplish. They are very slow in this country. Beggars thrive amazingly; you are surrounded by a swarm of them as soon as you land, and they pester you to death, and will not take no for an answer. Cork is called the third city in Ireland. It is built on both sides of the river Lee, which is navigable up to the city, and is the source from which the city is supplied with water. Cork is a pretty city, well built, and the government buildings are large and substantial stone edifices. The streets are remarkably clean and well paved, and the river here is spanned by four substantial stone bridges. There is considerable trade carried on here, and the streets and warehouses present a very lively appearance. From here I went to the famous Blarney Castle, a distance of five miles from Cork. I had a good view of the ruin, and ascended to the top of the tower and kissed the celebrated Blarney Stone. I then had a chat with the old lady who opened the door of the castle, and, to judge from her gift of gab, she must have been kissing the Blarney Stone from her infancy. I took a stroll through the beautiful Groves of Blarney, near the castle, which is a beautiful spot, and then returned to Cork. I was much amused with the fellow who drove the jaunting car that carried me to and from Blarney. He was full of anecdotes and drollery, and was a good specimen of the rollicking Irish peasant. I left Cork for Killarney by railroad, arriving at the lakes about nine o'clock in the evening, and had my first view of the Lakes of Killarney by moonlight. The beauty of this romantic spot is beyond description. It is well worth a trip across the Atlantic to see. I started the next morning to see the places of interest in the vicinity. The first place was the ruins of Ross Castle, the last stronghold in Munster that surrendered to Cromwell in 1672. The cannon are still on the walls that were used in the defence of the place. The view from the top of the castle is very fine, extending over two of the lakes to the mountains beyond. The next place was Torc Mountain and waterfall, a magnificent cascade that commences at the top of the mountain, in a place called the Devil's Punch Bowl, and, after leaping from rock to rock, falls into a wild glen below. From here I went to the ruins of Muckross Abbey, also situated on the banks of the lake. Here are the tombs of the kings of Munster, the Macarthy More, founder of the abbey; the O'Donohue and the O'Sullivan. They are all buried side by side, near what was the altar. In the centre of the cloisters is a yew tree of great size, which, it is said, is older than the abbey itself, which was founded in 1440. Leaving these interesting ruins, I started for the Glen Cottage, where a boat was in waiting to row me across the lake back to the Royal Victoria Hotel, and, after a little rest and refreshment, I started for the Gap of Dunloe, which is the most interesting spot in the vicinity of Killarney. It is a wild, desolate pass through the mountains, part of which you can ride a pony through, and the rest is done on foot. At the entrance to the pass stands the cottage of the famous Kate Kearney, now presided over by her grand-daughter. After partaking of a glass of beer by her grand-daughter's kindness, and a wee drop of the pale mountain dew (i. e. goat's milk and whiskey) we start on the journey, part of the way through which they are obliged to walk, as the roads are very bad, and a narrow pass, where the rocks project overhead and threaten to fall on you every step up the way. A small stream traverses every foot of the pass, expanding, at different points, into fine small lakes. After getting through the gorge you have to walk four miles to Lord

Brandon's cottage, where a boat is in waiting to take you back, and you have a splendid sail through the entire length of the three Lakes of Killarney, a distance of about fifteen miles, surrounded by scenery of the most romantic description, and passing small islands, on one of which are the ruins of an ancient abbey. The boat that took us had an American flag flying from her bow. I am sorry I have not space to give you a better description of this lovely place. After I had seen all that was to be seen, I took the train for Dublin, reaching that famous city about four o'clock in the morning, when all the inhabitants were asleep. Dublin is a fine city, and has, at one time, been a place of much importance. I saw the Zoological Garden, Phœnix Park, the four courts, O'Connell's monument, went down in the vault, saw and touched his coffin, visited the Trinity College, library and museum, and saw the original harp of Brian Boroihme, &c. From here I go to Glasgow, Scotland, and the Loch Lomond country, and then to Edinburgh, from whence I will write to you again.

Yours truly, MONS. LA THORNE.

To Correspondents.

DEXTER, Jacksonville, Ill.—I. Barney Fnin was born in Killkelly Co., Mayo, Ireland, Aug. 18, 1850. He has appeared four times in the ring, as follows:—Beat Jim Raddican, room, Bury, Lancashire, Eng., 48 rounds, 62 minutes, May 4th, 1867; beat Ned Grant, near Hull, Eng., 46 rounds, 48 minutes, March 4th, 1852; beat Jack Grady, Long Island, 13 rounds, 20 minutes, 19 seconds, Aug. 26, 1858; beat Tom Bradshaw, near Little Falls, N. Y., 42 rounds, 1 h. minutes July 23, 1859. 2. Patsy Reardon was born in Brandon Co., Cork, Ireland, in 1837, and has never been defeated, though having fought eight times in the old country, defeating Lass, Smith, Bob Travers and Jem Dillon, and making three draws with Jack Rooke (twice), Shipp and George King. He was also matched a second time with Shipp, but the latter died in training. His last fight was with Rooke, Nov. 24, 1863, he has not figured in the ring on American soil.

W. J. M., Mount Vernon, O.—1. Dexter's best time in harness was 2:17¾; under saddle 2:18. 2. He went against time when he made his harness time, and against General Butler when he made his saddle time. 3. He never was trained to wagon or cart. 4. The fastest running time in this country is by Fanny Ludlow, who, at Saratoga, ran a mile and a furlong in 1:58½, which is at the rate of a fraction over 1:43 1-9 to the mile.

E. O., Hillsdale, N. Y.—A, B, C and D are playing euchre A being dealer; all pass to A, who lifts it and goes alone. D says he will go alone against him, and succeeds in making the five tricks. What does D score?". Four points only, he having euchre'd A. D had a right to claim the privileges of a lone hand after A had declared to go alone.

D. D. D., Cincinnati, O.—1. At Templemore, County Tipperary, Ireland, 2 in London—an English Jew. 3. The Central Park contains 773 acres. It extends from the fifth to the Eighth avenues, east and west, and from Fifty-ninth street on the south to One Hundred and Tenth street on the north. 4. Morrissey was born Feb. 12, 1831.

J. H., Philadelphia.—1. It was a nine innings game. 2. We think Lady Thorn is the fastest trotter now on the turf, for she has beaten American Girl three times, and been beaten by her twice, and has three times beaten Goldsmith Maid, without sustaining a defeat. 3. One mile in 3:06 is the fastest velocipede time. 4. The Derby time for the last year was 2:52; for 1868, 2:43½, and for 1867, 2:52

BILLIARDS, Adrian Mich.—Both balls should be placed on their own spots, and they are vacant, and the player may place his ball so he can play the same as if the balls had not been off the table. If, however, the cue ball goes off the table, then the player pays the same forfeit as though said cue ball had gone into a pocket, and his opponent would be entitled to the next shot.

GEO. H., St. John, N. B.—1. St. Denis, Maillard's, Tremont, Brandreth, Revere, Continental, all on Broadway; French's, Lovejoy's and Lovejoy's, in the vicinity of City Hall. 2. Write to the office of the company. 3. Do not see any likelihood of it at present.

A. M. M., Story Farm.—1. The only horses that have beaten Dexter are Lady Thorn, Ethan Allen and Lucille in a running mile record. In his race with the latter Dexter hit his leg in the first heat and was withdrawn. 2. General Hunter never beat Dexter in a race. 3. Hamill's fastest time on five miles is 37:39.

INQUISITIVE.—1. Alabama, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, California, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Michigan, Maine, Mississippi, Missouri, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and Texas, all have a town called Lexington. 2. Thirty-three thousand. 3. One hundred and fifty dollars per clean.

FLAT FOOT, St. Louis, Mo.—1. The height of Charles Freeman, the American Giant, was 6 ft. 10¾ in.; we are not certain that he wore 800 boots. 2. Somerville, favorite in the first at odds of 2 to 1, and in the second at odds of 5 to 1 around the ring.

W. S., Central Bridge, N. Y.—Yankee Sullivan was found dead in a cell, San Francisco, Cal., believed by some to have been murdered by the Vigilance Committee. May 31st, 1856, aged 45.

J. M. K., New Orleans, La.—1. Address a letter to Jack Goulding, care of this office. 2. Quarter of a mile, 1:05½, by Jas. Nuttall; 100 yards, 9¾ seconds, by Geo. Seward.

E. M. W., New Lexington, O.—Never having used a "Collins Metal Watch," we are unable to dilate on its susceptibility to wear and tear.

TOBIAS.—1. She is the same lady that was formerly in the music hall business. 2. It is not the same party. One is an actor, while the other is a sporting man.

J. HOWARD, Louisville.—The Jack, when turned up as a trump, is scored immediately therefore you win; when made in play, however, Jack does not count until after high and low.

F. V. Y., Lynn.—1. The lady never wrote a poem with that title. 2. Fosabontas' quickest recorded time is 2:17¾, one mile. 3. He was manager of the Varieties just prior to his death.

F. H. I., Albany, N. Y.—If A made the trump and declared to go alone, B had no right to go alone; his three tricks count him two points for the euchre.

C. L. H., Muskegon.—1. Black and green are considered good colors. 2. Lotta was born in New York; was never apprenticed to any one.

AN AMERICAN, Baltimore, Md.—1. Write to Heenan himself, in our care. 2. His name was Lewis Baker. He was imprisoned for a length of time, but is now residing in this city.

T. J. D., Broome, N. J.—Allen's weight the day he fought McCoole, was stated by his trainer to be 170 lbs., though whether the statement was correct or not we cannot say.

A. M. D., White Sulphur Springs, Va.—1. Sheila. 2. Drop a note to Stephen Roberts, in our care. 3. A letter to Dick & Fitzgerald publishers, this city, will secure you the desired information.

BARNEY, Springfield.—Dexter has a better record than Ethan Allen, the former having 2:17¾, and the latter 2:18. Ethan Allen's time with running mate is no record for him, it not being trotting.

SPRINGFIELD.—P. who made Jack goes out before H. who made high, game. He must make the two points he says he before his opponent makes the one he wanted to win the game.

AMATEUR, St. Louis, Mo.—1. If the fight lasted longer than the time mentioned in the wager, you win.

ATHLETE A.—Such issues it is not our province to decide, as they are simply dependent on mutual understanding.

H. A. D., Washington, D. C.—Your polite letter received, and its contents appreciated and cordially returned.

P. H., Jersey City, Michigan.—A World's Fair was held in the Crystal Palace, New York, in 1853.

A. M. M., Story Farm.—1. Pocahontas and Billy Boyce all trotted a mile in less than 2:30.

PACKARD, Jr., Clinton.—John Stewart beat Captain McGowan's twenty mile time on the Riverside Park, Boston.

S. T., Camden, N. J.—Poole was the winner of his "rough and tumble" fight with Morrissey.

"A. M."—Nicely written, but not sufficiently "covered." We must reactfully decline.

CHIPS, Allegheny, Pa.—From your statement of the matter we decide that, as the ten dollar bet was a draw, Miller wins the $5.

MANY READERS, St. Louis, Mo.—The referee's deliberate decision is necessary in all cases.

COOPER'S POINT YACHT CLUB.—Thanks for your communication, but it is too old for publication in the CLIPPER.

TWO CONSTANT READERS, Boston, Mass.—Although he was opposed to Heenan at the time, he had nothing to do with that affair.

W. M. S., Danville, Ill.—We do not know anything about such a party.

L. C., Suffield, Ct.—As the terms are synonymous, the bet should be drawn.

J. C. AND J. H., Boston, Mass.—Joe Coburn was born July 20, 1835, and is consequently but 34 years of age.

L. J. M., Amherst, Mass.—We do not know where you can obtain a photograph of such as you wish.

EASTON, Md.—If you are members of the National Association you have no redress.

LILLY, Baltimore.—1. There is some talk of such a club in Chicago. 2. Soon, we believe. 3. Can't say. 4. No

"HATHAWAY," Troy.—1. It can be "called," but it will not be a game. 2. Five. 3. No.

M. T., Place Rubaix, Paris.—Government documents received all right. Thanks.

J. A. K., Laramie.—We do not know any one who could give you such information.

C. E. C., Carrollton.—A player cannot play alone unless he takes the responsibility of the trump.

KATA.—"If a party cries 'lone hand' at euchre, and is euchred, do the adversaries count two or four?". . . two.

M. DE RHODES, Cincinnati, O.—The advertisement will cost 50c. for each insertion.

G. S., New Orleans.—Use a mixture of common oil 1 pint, spirits turpentine ½ pint, sulphur 4 oz., daily.

L., Chicago.—1. The man on third base has the same advantage of a passed ball as though three balls had been called. 2. One out.

SCHENECTADY.—The bet should be drawn.

G., Pulaski.—1. We do not know. 2. Living in Boston. 3. Brainard and Allison, of the Cincinnatis. 4. Yes—we don't.

J. T. C., Little Falls.—The party betting that the club will lose two games loses.

SHAKESPEARE.—He never played in the piece to the best of our belief.

K. A. R., Boston.—He does not intend bringing his show to this city.

CLAYWELL, Baltimore.—Send to W. C. Wemyss, 3 Astor place, this city.

L. G. S., Baltimore.—Mrs. F. B. Conway is manageress of the Park Theatre, Brooklyn. Conway Cox is in no way related to her.

MANAGER.—We cannot inform you of the future movements of the lady.

WALTON.—1. Jimmy is not married. 2. See our City Summary of last week.

"COLLEGIAN," Philadelphia.—Will appear as soon as we can spare the space.

J. P. S., Hastings, N. Y.—By a rudder controlled by the feet of the bow oarsman.

PUGILIST.—Johnny Brannagan, brother of Scotty, of Brooklyn, was killed in Brooklyn on August 11th.

OLIVER TWIST, Washington, D. C.—1. Loring pulled stroke and Fay bow oar. 2. Asa Brainard, of the "Red Stockings."

READER, Schenectady.—All bets on the game, except on the general result, should be drawn.

J. S. LAWRENCE, Mass.—1. Bendigo beat Paddock June 5th, 1850. 2. The Two Thousand Guineas.

NEW YORK.—Goldsmith Maid has made the fastest successive three heats of a mile on record.

BAY CITY, Mich.—Dexter's fastest time, 2:17¾, was made in harness.

PITTSBURGH.—Hamill did claim a foul in his first race with Ward on the Hudson.

J. T. H., Toronto, C. W.—As the bet was that Berry would beat Tinning, and the latter did not start, it is a draw.

YORKMITE, Chicago.—There is no rule governing the pronunciation of proper names.

CHICAGO.—Four fours and and a seven count twenty-four, viz.:—twelve for fifteens and twelve for double pair royal.

CORRESPONDENT.—1. We believe she has no children. 2. George Stevenson was his name.

SUTLER.—His greatest recorded lift is 2,600 pounds. We cannot give you the other information you desire.

THOMAS B.—A deposit must accompany your challenge to ensure insertion.

D. N. S., Boston.—A straight, with king high, beats one composed of ace, deuce, etc.

S. N. M., Providence.—Will shortly appear.

C. E. B., Milwaukee.—He had no right to make a second cut.

C. W. S.—We do not know.

"THE SCRIBE," Albany.—Sketches respectfully declined.

S. J. M., Oil City, Pa.—The bet must be drawn.

C. D., Detroit, Mich.—No.

TREASURER, New York.—We do not know of any.

W. A. W., Albany.—They have not lost a game this season.

HAVANAH.—Yes, loss.

M. L. C., St. Louis, Mo.—It is a draw.

CLAYWELL, Baltimore.—See answer to W. E. S., in our last issue.

G. J. G., Milwaukee.—Hung, no doubt.

C. H.—A. Bothern was born in Liverpool, Eng.

"EPITAPH ON THE MUGGINS PLAYER."—Will shortly appear.

E. M.—Jack takes precedence.

NELLIE, Springfield.—See answer to W. E. S. in our last issue.

MIKE A. E., Cleveland.—See our Cricket Summary.

W. K., Cannidgeport, Mass.—The bet is a draw.

STROKE.—See reply to "A. M. D."

HARRY HIGGINS.—A letter to our City Office.

FRED, New York.—1. Dexter's fastest time was 2:17¾. 2. No.

NOBBY.—Write to Brookes' Academy, 161 Broome street, this city.

G. F. R., Sturgis, Mich.—The trotting horse Henry is 7 years old.

W. G., Wheeling.—Dexter's fastest time is 2:17¾.

A GRAVE CHARGE.—A "respectable" female has been detected in stealing the wreaths of immortelles from the tombs at Pere-la-Chaise, Paris, and reselling them; but her vault-ing ambition has at last o'erleaped itself, and she will be entombed as a "dead" beat.

BANQUET TO THE RIVAL FOUR.—"Old Jim" has sent the following toast, per cable, to be read at the banquet given to Oxford and Harvard by the London Rowing Club:—"The Lion rowers and the Eagle's creams."

"OUR JIM," who is somewhat of that persuasion himself, thinks that a goose should always be held sacred from attack, on the ground that it "saves its down." A fellow feeling, etc.

THE NEWSPAPERS have been chronicling that the "lion" at White Sulphur Springs is Bisque Bey. What a queer colored animal the fellow must be!

"THE BOYS OF THE PERIOD."—The Oxfords, when they came to a full stop at the end of the race.

STARTLING TRANSFORMATION.—A steamer "turning in" to a wharf.

A "NOTE"-ABLE TIME IN THE MORNING.—The time it becomes dew.

FOWL BOUNDS.—Barn yards.

AN APPROPRIATE GAME FOR BLACKSMITHS.—Old sledge.

Squibs and Things.

— Montreal has a free bath, which a local paper calls a "wretched, suicidal-looking place," so rocky that it is a miracle that any of the bathers come out of the pool without at least a dislocated ankle, while, "as for diving, ten chances to one but you crack your skull."

— "Exuberant loyalty" is the appellation used to express the mode of reception given to the Prince and Princess of Wales at Wildbard, by the London Times, to which an Englishman responded by calling it "obtrusive snobbery," and the John Bull was right.

THE SCOTTISH GAMES.—The members of the New York Caledonian Club, of this city, will hold their thirteenth annual celebration at their old trysting grounds, Jones Woods, on the afternoon of Thursday next, Sept. 2d. Besides the terpsichorean attractions, the programme of sport embraces no less than twenty-six games, exclusive of a contest between quoitists, for each of which three prizes are offered, some of which are very valuable and will induce extensive and spirited competition between the club athletes. The festivities will be inaugurated by an old-fashioned Scotch reel, and the hour appointed for commencing the games is ten o'clock A. M. The success which has attended these reunions in former years, and the excellent order invariably maintained, renders it safe for us to predict as great a throng as ever, and equal enjoyment with the best of them; and the strict decorum preserved upon these occasions is to be found in the respect entertained for the muscular powers of these hardy looking wearers of the kilt by those inclined to be turbulent, not less than the excellent police arrangements, the sons of Auld Scotia being ever ready to lend a hand in quelling disturbances when occasion requires, which is seldom the case. For full particulars in reference to the day's sports we refer the reader to the advertisement in another column.

FIREMEN'S CONTESTS—MORE FAST TIME IN THE CRESCENT CITY.—On Sunday, August 15th, the members of Mechanics Engine Co. No. 6—"Tigers"—at their pic-nic, held at the fair grounds, ran half a mile with 30 members, took suction and sent water through 50 feet of hose in 2:41¾, the running time being 2:34¾. This time may seem to many firemen in the north as incorrect, but our correspondent avers that it is not, as three well known gentlemen of New Orleans were timekeepers. The boys there would like to see some of the crack companies of the north and east try this same kind of race, and let them know though the Crescents have what time they can make, as probably some of the New Orleans companies will visit this section next spring. At this same pic-nic, what is known as a fire service race came off, which was made against time by the horse and ten men of Hope H. and L. Co. No. 3. The horse Pat was hitched to the engine, half mile the distance, and the run was made in 1:39½, and water thrown in 2:04½, beating No. 12's time in a similar race one and a half seconds.

WATSON VS. DION.—In a billiard match of 1,000 points, American game, push barred, for $200, played at Montreal on the 24th ult., between S. F. Watson, of St. Albans, and Frank Dion, of Montreal, the former proved victorious by scoring his thousand to his opponent's 596. On the fifty-third innings the game stood—Watson, 984; Dion, 596. The St. Albans man took the balls and soon ran up the necessary sixteen to complete the game. The result was greeted with loud applause, and Watson was congratulated by his friends. Immediately after the game Cyrille Dion stated that he desired to back either A. Gullor or J. Bessinger, Jr., against Watson for $300 a side, home and home game, best two out of three, when Mr. McConnell, of Montreal, accepted the challenge on behalf of Watson, and it was decided that Bessinger should play. The score:—

Watson—2, 41, 21, 10, 0, 33, 0, 0, 0, 0, 3, 56, 5, 16, 31, 24, 24, 5, 0, 41, 0, 3, 0, 16, 7, 153, 21, 16, 17, 8, 0, 0, 22, 0, 0, 0, 17, 68, 32, 13, 0, 87, 18, 25, 0, 0, 0, 25, 3, 16, 19, 31, 16, Total, 1,000

Dion—2, 21, 4, 11, 28, 7, 37, 5, 20, 6, 10, 14, 44, 12, 56, 0, 7, 0, 0, 33, 9, 0, 17, 13, 41, 4, 6, 13, 0, 0, 22, 10, 0, 0, 0, 0, 47, 4, 13, 0, 5, 0, 14, 0, 15, 2, 0, 2, 5, 0, 13, 13, 8, Total, 596

Winner's average—16 14-17. Dion's average—11 13-33. Biggest runs—Watson, 41, 56, 41, 153, 68, 87, 68. Dion, 43, 56, 41, 47. Time of game—Three hours twenty minutes.

RIFLE PRACTICE IN CANADA.—On the 25th ult. a rifle match took place at Montreal, C. E., between ten picked men belonging to the 8th Battalion of Quebec and a like number from the Grand Trunk Rifles, of the former place. They shot at 200, 300, 400 and 500 yards distance respectively, and the former won by a score of 619 to 604 . . . . . The Quebec Provincial Rifle Association held their first annual prize meeting last week, commencing on the 24th ult.

SHOW IN BROOKLYN.—William Cassin will give an exhibition at 183 York street, Brooklyn, on Saturday evening, 4th inst., consisting of club swinging, dancing, singing, walking, wrestling, etc.

THE INTERNATIONAL FOUR-OARED RACE

BETWEEN

OXFORD AND HARVARD COLLEGE CREWS,

FOR THE

Collegiate Championship of the World,

ROWED

From Putney to Mortlake, on the Thames, Eng., August 27th.

THE OXONIANS CARRY OFF THE HONORS IN A FAIR RACE.

IMMENSE GATHERING OF SPECTATORS.

The agreement entered into several months since, between representatives of Oxford and Harvard Universities, to put at rest the question of superiority between the oarsmen thereof by engaging in a four oared contest, and which, since the arrival of the Americans in England, has created intense interest in both countries, was consummated over the Metropolitan Course, from Putney to Mortlake, Eng., on Friday, Aug. 27th, the Oxford crew winning. Below we present different accounts received pe. the cable, prefacing them with a

HISTORY OF THE MATCH.

That spirit of rivalry and anxiety to lead, so characteristic of Americans, is strong within the oarsmen of Harvard, and their repeated victories over Yale naturally gave rise to a desire for competition with the oft successful oarsmen of Oxford. Accordingly on the 6th of November, 1867, a communication of an informal character was addressed by R. C. Watson, on behalf of the Harvards, to the President of the O. U. B. C., desiring to know whether an eight oar crew, representing Harvard, could row the Oxford University crew on a straight course, free from obstructions, etc., between the 1st and middle of September, 1868, the Americans to row without a coxswain. The reply was unfavorable, the Oxfords interposing objections to the clause in reference to a coxswain, insisting that each boat should carry one, and also desiring that the race, if agreed upon, should take place over the usual collegiate course on the Thames. Several letters followed, but they were unable to come to any agreement in reference to a coxswain, and the steeping Cup, Paris, taking with them two shells, one built by Elliott and the other by a Boston builder. They arrived at Liverpool July 20th and were enthusiastically received by a large crowd of persons who had congregated upon the dock to extend a welcome to the venturesome and plucky strangers. They reached London on July 21st, and took up their quarters at the Star and Garter, Putney, tendered to the guests of the Metropolitan Rowing Club. The latter club had sent a challenge to Harvard immediately after Oxford's acceptance, in which they stated that they held the amateur championship of the Thames, and that if our oarsmen purposed contesting for said title it would be necessary to meet them. To this the Harvards responded that they had no desire to meet any but college crews, the question of amateur championship not being included in the race, and they, therefore, declined the challenge, but gratefully accepted the proffers of hospitality embodied in the communication. The members of said club received their guests with the greatest cordiality and did all in their power to render them perfectly "at home," placing their club house and boats at their disposal and cheerfully imparting information.

ON THE THAMES.

The news of their arrival quickly spread over London and their quarters were visited by large numbers, who, one and all, expressed themselves most favorably impressed by their appearance, but the boats they had taken with them, though praised on account of the beauty of their workmanship, were pronounced far inferior to those used by fours in England, the main objection being their length, that in which they had proposed pulling the race measuring forty-eight feet, which approaches more nearer to the length of eights than fours used upon those waters. As was afterward proven, the boat in which they row, using oars made by Ayling, her dimensions being 44 feet long, 21 inches wide, at the widest part, and 8 inches deep; depth over all, 11½ inches, forward 7 inches, aft 6½ inches. Harry Kelley, ex-champion of England, addressed a letter to the Harvards, offering his services as coach, but they were declined, from motives which all will understand, and though this decission may have operated to the disadvantage of our oarsmen—for no one is better qualified to give correct information, relative to the intricacies of such a course than Kelley—still they are pardonable for pursuing the course they did. Had they accepted the offer, and afterward suffered defeat, there would have been no lack of persons to censure them for accepting advice from those whose sympathies were, of course, with their own countrymen. Kelley, however, received the thanks of the Harvards and accompanied them over the course once or twice. A couple of days after their arrival the Americans changed their quarters to the White House, close by, where they were provided with better accommodations and more retired. We neglected to mention above that they took with them their own cook—a precaution deemed necessary in order to ensure a strict continuance of the regimen which they had followed at Cambridge.

The Oxford crew was composed of F. Willan, A. C. Yarborough, J. C. Tinne, S. D. Darbishire, and J. H. Hall, coxswain—the finest crew, it was universally admitted, that has ever upheld the honor of the dark blue upon the Thames. From the period of their selection as the opponents of Harvards until shortly after the debut of the Americans on the Thames, they trained at a sequestered spot on the right bank of the river, below Eton and Windsor, known as Black Potts, belonging to the head master at Eaton, Here they found a desideratum very difficult to secure in England, with its narrow, serpentine streams, the numerous lines of railway—and punt, which, while offering fine facilities for towing exercise, afforded them seclusion from the eyes of the curious, so much wished for by those engaged in preparing for an important event like this. They shifted to the Thames, at Putney, on the 11th ult., and the English press were unanimous in pronouncing their style perfection. They pulled the race in a boat built by Salter, 42 feet in length. With the appearance of the rival crews upon the course the excitement increased, and the knots gathered upon the banks to witness their preliminary paddles greatly augmented, and were added to daily as the date agreed upon for the race approached. The press commented at length upon them, and upon the probable result of the contest, in each issue. Many prominent men and high civic dignitaries evinced their interest by visiting the crews at their quarters, and each day the cable acquainted us with the progress of affairs, and flashed intelligence relative to any new phase the match had assumed. The oarsmanship of the Harvards was commented upon very unfavorably by the papers, without exception, all discovering some defect in their style, but failing to agree as to what that defect was—had each and all of these strictures been just, then indeed the rowing of the Americans had little to recommend it, and months of assiduous training would not suffice to remedy the faults pointed out. As time wore on, however, these daily comments became more favorable until, at last, it was even hinted that there was a chance for the Harvards to win, and that if the Oxfords wished to maintain the prestige they had won they would be obliged to "pull for it" harder than they ever did before. A general desire was expressed for a fair race and the authorities were urged to adopt measures to secure the same, in obedience to which the Thames Conservancy Board took the matter in hand, causing the bridge of Putney to be barred, serving the Captains of steamboats and other craft with printed instructions forbidding their appearance upon the course during, and for a certain time prior to, the race, and detailing a large body of police to guard the banks and prevent "invasion" by small boats.

The Harvard substitutes, Lyman and Fay, remained here some time after the departure of their fellow collegians, and rowed in the University race against Yale, July 23d, in which Harvard achieved another triumph. They left a few days afterward, and on August 4th they took seats in the boat, after which the crew was re-organized, the new comers taking the place of Bass and Rice, a change which made a visible improvement in the pace.

THE RIVAL CREWS.

We here with present the names, positions and weights of the respective crews, together with brief sketches of the men and their performances:—

OXFORD.
No. 1. S. D. Darbishire (stroke)	159½ lbs.
No. 2. J. C. Tinne	169½ lbs.
No. 3. A. C. Yarborough	163½ lbs.
No. 4. F. Willan (bow)	164 lbs.
No. 5. J. H. Hall (coxswain)	108 lbs.

Mr. Darbishire, of Balliol, is about 22 years of age, is less in stature than any of the others, and has rowed for two years against Cambridge, and pulled stroke in the race of last spring. Tinne, of University, has rowed in three successive University races, is tall, about 23 years of age, and perhaps the most formidable, as he is the most muscular man who ever occupied a seat in an Oxford boat. Yarborough, of Lincoln, is in his twenty-first year, and has twiced rowed in University races, besides winning the Oxford sculls. Willan, of Exeter, stands at the head of the list in oaric reputation, having rowed four successive years in the victorious boat against the light blue. He is of middle height and about 23 years old. Hall, of Corpus Christi, never steered a University boat before, but is thoroughly acquainted with the intricacies and peculiarities of the course, and, possessing a sharp eye and excellent judgment, is "the man for the place."

HARVARD.
No. 1. A. P. Loring (stk.)	154 lbs.
No. 2. W. H. Simmons	171 lbs.
No. 3. P. O. Lyman	185 lbs.
No. 4. J. S. Fay (bow)	155 lbs.
No. 5. A. Burnham (cox.)	111 lbs.

C. Loring, of Boston, the leading oarsman of Harvard, and the most experienced man of the crew, stands 5 feet 11½ inches in height, 24 years of age, and was the first man ever taken into the University boat during his freshman year. He rowed stroke in the races against Yale in '67 and '68, and this makes the ninth race in which he has taken part. Simmons, of Concord, is exactly the same height as Loring, and is 20 years of age. He is, without exception, the strongest man that ever exerted himself for the victory of the Magenta, and to the decided action taken by him we are indebted for the present exciting contest. He pulled in the University boat of '67 and '68, and has been engaged in eight races in all. Last year he had as much experience as the others in shell rowing, but is, nevertheless, a fine oarsman, stands 5 feet 11 inches in height, and is in the neighborhood of 22 years of age. He was captain and stroke of the Harvards in the race at Worcester in July last. Fay, of Boston, made his first appearance in the University boat at Worcester this year, but he is an experienced oarsman, having done most of his pulling in single sculls, and is conceded a good as any man in the crew. He is a member of the Boston school, stands 5 feet 11¾ inches in height, and is 22 years old. Burnham, of Chicago, is a man well fitted for the position in which he was placed, possessing all the qualifications necessary, and understanding well what was required of him. He did all in his power to familiarize himself with the course, having, it is stated, been over it every day, under the guidance of a man thoroughly posted, and who could be depended upon.

By a comparison of the aggregate weight of the opposing crews, as given in the above tables, it will be observed that Oxford exceeded Harvard by 47½ pounds—an average of almost twelve pounds per man. Both crews were trained very fine and consequently this preponderance of weight in favor of the Englishmen was a strong advantage to them, as it was made up of muscle and sinew which would prove available in a contest where strength and endurance were as much, if not more, required than skill. On the contrary the difference in weight between coxswains was eleven pounds, likewise in favor of Oxford, and this difference was one of dead weight alone, militating against the speed of the boat. It will be seen, therefore, that the total amount of weight, of an advantageous character, brought against the Americans, was 58½ pounds. In the matter of age the crews, taken on an average, were about on an equality, while in boats they were probably as evenly mated.

THE COURSE.

As we have stated above, the course chosen for the contest was that stretching from Putney to Mortlake, a distance of four miles and two furlongs, from start to finish, the rowing being entirely up stream. For some time after the arrangement of the race the press and public, even upon this side of the ocean, strongly urged that some other course be selected, the reasons assigned therefor being that, aside from the great disadvantage at which the strangers would be placed by rowing upon a great tidal river like the Thames, winding in its course and so variable in its currents, it would prove an utter impossibility to secure a clear course and consequent perfect fairness. The objections thus urged were unavailing, and the decision reached from fair-minded men of long experience in boating matters upon the other side, including the Oxonians themselves. However, upon the arrival of the Americans on the banks of the Thames, and after they had been shown over the Metropolitan course, we were surprised by the flashing of the intelligence across the wires that they had concluded to row upon the Thames, convinced that it was in all respects the most suitable. If the facilities afforded by this course for sight seeing, and the certainty of securing a far greater congregation of spectators, influenced them in arriving at this determination, then we can easily understand why they fixed upon the Putney to Mortlake course; but if these considerations had nothing to do with it, then we are at a loss to conceive why they pursued the course they did. Whatever the cause may have been, we are of the opinion that the selection was most unwise, for the brief period allowed them for practice was by no means sufficient to enable them to master the intricacies of the course or become thoroughly acquainted with the eccentricities of the tide. Putney is a pleasant, old-fashioned suburb of the great metropolis, about six miles and a half from the city, on the south or Surrey side, and accessible by rail, road or steamboats. It is the headquarters of the rowing men and amateur boating clubs, who have their boat houses moored there; several boat building establishments are also located here, prominent among the number being that of Simmonds, where the boat in which the Harvards rowed was built by the Greenpoint Alderman, in an upper room—in short the spot is the great centre of boating pastime on the Thames. The starting point was the Aqueduct Bridge, about thirty yards above the massive wooden structure spanning the stream at Putney. At this point and up as far as Hammersmith Bridge, one mile and six furlongs, from the starting place, the river is about seven hundred feet wide. There is a gentle turn at the first quarter of a mile on the course up the river, where the stream sweeps round Crab Tree Point. The river sweeps in a long curve till near the second mile, where a handsome iron suspension bridge spans the stream from Hammersmith, on the Middlesex shore, to the Surrey side. There are no houses on the southern side, the path or towing road being elevated a few feet above the surrounding marshes or withy grounds. Immediately on clearing the Hammersmith Bridge the current runs rapidly round the bend of the land, which tends sharply eastward and south. Here is a great bight, in which lies Chiswick, the Western suburb of Hammersmith, with one or two low, sedgy islands in front, contracting the main stream. From this corner to the railway bridge of the Southwestern Branch to Kew and Hounslow, the course is almost straight water, where the two villages of Barnes and Mortlake fringe the Surrey shore, the Middlesex side being wholly covered by sedges and withy beds. The course ends at a boat moored off the Ship Inn, at Mortlake. The colleges formerly held their annual contests on a course stretching from Westminster to Putney, which is much longer, but it was abandoned owing to the roughness of the water in the open reaches of Battersea below, as likewise the impossibility of securing a clear course below Putney Bridge, in consequence of the vast amount of traffic on the river.

THE HARVARD STYLE, ETC.

The following card, denying reports extensively circulated prior the race, was published in the London papers of the 27th, by which it will be seen that the Harvards adhered strictly to their own style of rowing

THE NEWS IN THIS CITY.

The Oxford boat arrived at the ship at Mortlake at 5 o'clock 36 minutes and 47 seconds. The news of the victory was received by means of the English Cable at the Associated Press office in this city at 1 o'clock and 4 minutes—just 23 minutes and 13 seconds afterward. The messenger was obliged to carry the dispatch three quarters of a mile on horseback to the nearest telegraph station at Mortlake. Not since the memorable prize battle between Heenan and Sayers, in 1860, has so much excitement been created, or so much enthusiasm elicited, by any international event, as was awakened by this collegiate trial of skill and strength—the second struggle which has taken place since the Republic was founded between picked oarsmen of England and America. This interest was particularly noticeable in this city, among the down-town business men, Bulls and Bears of Wall and Broad streets, although partaken of by all classes, and especially by boating men, amateur and professional. Pools were sold by Dr. Underwood, at the Astor House, during the morning, most of them being for small amounts, averaging $50 for the Oxfords and $50 for the Harvards. A number of private telegrams were received by prominent brokers, and as these represented that two of the crew were indisposed, this fact served to depress the betting still more. Many bets of large amounts were made up to the period of receiving the announcement of the result. Arrangements had been made to fire a salute in the City Hall Park in case the news should prove favorable, but the artillerists had no occasion to "ram her home." It is safe to say that the large majority expected just such news as was received, and although it occasioned deep regret, yet all were gratified to learn that nothing dishonorable had marked the encounter, the knowledge that our gallant representatives had been ensured a perfectly fair race making up, in a measure, for their vanquishment. Various excuses were offered for the defeat, some ascribing it to bad steering, others to the indisposition of Simmons, the strongest man in the boat, and the apparent overtraining of both him and Loring, and more to different reasons than the two mentioned, however, were the reasons mainly advanced. It is not to be wondered at that Mr. Burnham should steer wildly at times, and worse than his opponent, considering the brief period which he was allowed for learning the vagaries of the course rowed over, and, therefore, no blame attaches to him; he did very well under the circumstances. For two days prior to the race Simmons is reported to have been troubled with the diarrhœa, and if this is correct it must have materially affected the result, as all know the weakening effects of this complaint; it is strange, however, if he was so bad as is reported, that either Bass or Fay were not substituted, they having been taken over expressly to provide against just such an emergency. At all events the Harvards made a good fight and deserve credit, which they have irrefutably received upon all sides. We will know better how to view the result when our correspondent's letter arrives.

A LATER TELEGRAM.

Below we give a later telegram giving a corrected sketch of the race:—

LONDON, August 28, 1869.

The Oxfords passed Barnes Bridge only two lengths ahead, the Harvards having made a brilliant spurt before reaching the bridge, by which they gained about three-quarters of a length. The coxswain merely sprinkled water in Loring's face. The judge says the Harvards were only half a length, clear water, in the rear at the finish. After the race the two crews dined at Mortlake with Mr. Phillips, who invited a large party to meet them. During the dinner the Oxford men, in speeches, said that if not the hardest, at least as hard as any they ever contested, and praised the pluck and work of the Harvards. The Harvards consider that their steering was rather out, making a possible difference of from half a length to a length. Loring was rather unwell, owing to overtraining. The Harvards are well satisfied with their work, and well pleased with the arrangements which prevented any difficulty during the race. There are some statements made that Simmons' diarrhœa was caused by a course of jalap. It must have been his own fault if this be true, as he had no business to accept anything to eat or drink from any one not authorized to furnish it. The Americans here are perfectly satisfied with respect to the conduct of the race. The general impression is that the Oxfords must now row the Harvards on their own waters next year.

A FIVE MILE MATCH

BETWEEN

JOHN BIGLIN AND JOHN MEKEEL FOR $300 A SIDE.

Pursuant to a call issued by the Cold Spring oarsman, in accepting the challenge of John A. Biglin, a meeting of the parties and their friends was held on Wednesday, 25th inst., when a prolonged discussion occurred, the latter declining to row in not less than three weeks time from date of signing articles, and Mekeel declining to make the match upon such terms, stating that he could not afford to waste so much time for the amount to be pulled for. Finding that he was not to be shaken in this resolution the metropolitan party agreed to shorten the time, and articles were drawn up by the stipulation of which they bind themselves to row a five mile race, 2½ miles to a stake-boat and return, in boats 17 feet 6 inches in length, give or take two inches, for the sum of $300 a side; the race to take place on the Hudson river course, starting from a point off the Elysian Fields, Hoboken, N. J., and rowing up stream, on Wednesday, Sept. 8th, at 5 o'clock P. M., play or pay, because he inserted providing that in case the leading boat is interfered with by any outside parties the man so interfered with shall be awarded the race; also that the outside boat becomes entitled to the inside track only when her stern is sufficiently ahead of the inside boat to show clear water between them, and that either boat swerving from a direct course to impede the progress of the other shall be ruled out. The referee is to be chosen on the day of the race and each party is to furnish a stake-boat. Half of the stakes are now up, and the balance must be posted on Tuesday, Sept. 7th. The ability which each man has exhibited in the numerous races, in which they have engaged, renders it certain that, barring accident, an exciting contest will be witnessed on the day. Biglin is one of the well known "Biglin Brothers," who, with Denny Leary, as stroke, formed the once champion four-oared crew of America (making the best on record five mile time on record, viz.: 30:44¾), and is considered the best professional sculler resident in the metropolis, either in scull or working boats, while Mekeel has rowed match races with Henry Coulter, John Tyler, Jr., and others, as well as rowed against all the best men who have shown on our waters for some years past.

BOATING ON THE POTOMAC.—A four oared race, for a purse of $25, was announced to take place between crews belonging to the Phantom and Clipper clubs, of Washington, D. C., on the 26th ult., but the latter failed to come to time, and the Phantoms, by rowing over the course, obtained the money. Later in the afternoon Colonel E. G. Wheeler and a party of friends made their appearance at the aqueduct in the handsome gig boat Lady Sally, belonging to the Colonel, and proceeding to a convenient distance opposite the Phantom's rendezvous, challenged them for a race to Wash's Bay. The banter was promptly accepted and the craft made an even start from the aqueduct bridge at about 7 o'clock. The crews of each boat went to work in earnest, but for only a few minutes did the boys of the Sally do their best, as it soon became evident that the Phantom was by no means her match, and ordinary work would keep her far ahead of her adversary; accordingly the men "let up" and glided along the balance of the route at about half speed under the exhilarating influence of a delightful southern breeze, the Sally entering the bay about thirty minutes ahead of the Phantom. Col. Wheeler's boat is a beautiful model, and pronounced by the "knowing ones" to be just the thing for a fast run. She is twenty-nine feet long, five feet beam, and was built in France during the war, for the Confederate government, to be used by the ram Stonewall. Her crew were composed of the following gentlemen:—Col. E. G. Wheeler, coxswain; and Messrs. Levi Jones, Wm. S. Pierce, Geo. Miller, Benj. Wade, Wm. Wilson and Geo. Smith, at the oars. The Phantom is a flat bottom boat of smaller dimensions.

BROWN AND RENFORTH.—A cable telegram dated London, August 21st, states that a match has been made between Walter Brown and James Renforth, to row on the Tyne, Eng., for £100 and the Championship, the course to be from Tyne High Level Bridge to Leamington Point, 4¾ miles, and the race to take place between Sept. 23d and Oct. 1st. A later dispatch, however, states that arrangements have not yet been completed. Brown declines to row on the Tyne, finding that the river is unsuitable, but has no objection to the Thames. It was expected that Renforth would accept Brown's challenge to row on the latter river.

FAST PASSAGE BY THE CITY OF PARIS.—This famous ocean steamer, Inman line, has made another very quick western passage across the Atlantic, accomplishing the distance from Queenstown to this port in a little over eight days, and arriving at 5:15 on the 24th ult.

RENFORTH BEATS KELLY AND SADLER.—In a regatta held on the Thames, Eng., Aug. 21st, Renforth defeated Harry Kelley and Joe Sadler.

BLEW AND PEACH will probably pull another ten miler soon.

PEDESTRIANISM.

THE LONG DISTANCE CUP.—James Smith, the winner of the silver, gold lined cup given at Trenton, N. J., on July 5th, by Messrs. Colbert and Taldon, informs us that he intends to give it as a prize for a fifty mile walking match, to take place on the 4th of October, which falls on Monday. It was the understanding when this trophy was offered, that it was to remain in possession of the winner six months before it became his personal property, and that in the meantime he was to defend it against all comers. This seems to have been an error, however, else it would be out of the power of the present holder to thus give it away. He states that the entrance fee will be $10, which must be sent to this office not later than Sept. 13th, and all parties not forwarding said sum by the designated date will not be eligible to contend. Smith intends returning home during the month of October.

SMITH TO HAYDOCK.—In reply to John Haydock's challenge James Smith called upon us, on the 30th ult., and stated that he will meet Haydock at this office at 10 o'clock A. M. on Wednesday, 1st inst., and be prepared to make a match to walk any distance, up to 100 miles, for as much as the latter desires to put up. He has left fifty dollars, and states that, if requisite, he will make the whole amount to be walked for good at the meeting on the 1st.

MICKEY FREE REDIVIVUS.—The redoubtable and unsqueichable "Mickey Free" (Robert Harriot) is not dead, but moves and has his being in spite of the newspaper attempts to kill him off. He wants to "walk anybody," as usual.

AMERICAN TURF.

The Fastest Trotting Race Ever Witnessed on Long Island.

LADY THORN DEFEATS AMERICAN GIRL AND GOLDSMITH MAID, IN THREE STRAIGHT HEATS, FOR A PURSE OF $3,500—PROSPECT PARK COURSE, L. I.—TIME, 2:20¾! 2:20¼!! 2:20¼!!!

On Saturday, Aug. 28th, the Prospect Park Course was the scene of the finest and fastest trotting contest, between the three most renowned mares now on the American turf, that ever took place on the classic soil of Long Island. The association belonging to that course had offered a purse of $3,500 for a race of mile heats, best three in five, in harness, for Lady Thora, American Girl and Goldsmith Maid, and these three famous trotting crocks were entered for the rich prize thus offered for their competition. A race between such a trio of fast flyers was an irresistible attraction to all lovers of trotting, and the attendance was consequently enormously large, fully ten thousand people being present to witness it. The grand stand was crowded to its utmost capacity; the enclosure occupied by a vast array of carriages of every description, freighted with ladies and gentlemen; and the piazzas and balconies of the magnificent club house filled with the elite of Brooklyn society. A larger and more select concourse of citizens was never witnessed on a trotting track, and the race was productive of the most perfect and unalloyed enjoyment to all who witnessed it. The cool sea breezes that swept over the course, from the adjacent bay of New York, agreeably tempered the sultry rays of the sun, and the only drawback was the clouds of dust raised by the high wind that prevailed, which rendered the usually delightful drive down to the course somewhat unpleasant, and on the track occasionally obscured both horses and drivers from the view of the spectators during the race. The wind also materially affected the speed of the horses, making the time of the heats slower than would have been the case under more favorable circumstances.

All the three contestants have distinguished themselves on the trotting turf during the present summer. American Girl at Narragansett Park, in June last, gained a record of 2:19 in a second heat. Goldsmith Maid, at Buffalo, on the 5th of August, trotted three heats of a race in the fastest aggregate time on record (6:59), all three being made under 2:20. Lady Thorn, in her match with Goldsmith Maid, in July last, on the Union Course, trotted a heat in 2:20¼, the fastest ever made on that track, and only equaled by Flora Temple, on the Fashion Course, in her memorable race with the double team Ethan Allen and Socks. Besides these fast performances, the three mares had met together repeatedly this season. Lady Thorn had beaten American Girl twice, and suffered defeat twice from her. American Girl had beaten Goldsmith Maid this season, viz., at Narragansett Park (for second money in the race won by American Girl), and on the Union Course, L. I. No wonder, therefore, that their present meeting was looked upon with peculiar interest, and the cause of unusual excitement in sporting circles.

When the horses came upon the track there was a general rush to take stock of their appearance and condition. Goldsmith Maid, driven by Budd Doble (who jointly owns her with Mr. Jackman), looked as fine as silk and moved well, evidently pleasing her numerous partisans with her blooming condition. American Girl, driven by her new trainer, Ben Daniels, also looked and went well, but the latter says that she is far from being herself yet, and her owner unhesitatingly asserts that she was poisoned previous to her race with Goldsmith Maid, at Philadelphia, and has not yet recovered from the effects of the opiate administered. Lady Thorn looked remarkably bright in her coat, and presented the same appearance as she did on the day she beat Goldsmith Maid on the Union Course last July. Her stride was vigorous and powerful, and she moved fast and freely. To the general surprise, Dan Pfifer did not hold the reins over her, for he was laid up by illness, but in his place Bill Cheney, the big mare's part owner, Mr. James D. McMann, the veteran driver and trainer of the once famous "Queen of the Trotting Turf," Flora Temple. Out of practice as a driver, and the fact of his never having pulled a rein over Lady Thorn and was consequently ignorant of her peculiarities, his appearance on the sulky behind her made her chance look less hopeful, and the betting went largely against her shrewd and experienced trotting men, however, like Sam Hoagland, Oliver Marshall, Joe Elliott, and others, observing the mare's magnificent condition, fancied her strongly, and invested their greenbacks on her at the tempting odds she stood at in the pools, which Tommy Johnson sold on the track. Goldsmith Maid brought $210; American Girl $80, and Lady Thorn $70; the recent strange and unaccountable defeat of the latter by Lantern Boy, at Saratoga, causing her to be so low in public estimation.

FIRST HEAT.—American Girl had the pole, Lady Thorn the centre position, and Goldsmith Maid the outside. They scored five times before they got the word, and when at last it was given, Goldsmith Maid and American Girl were head and head, and Lady Thorn half a length behind them. As they went around the turn, American Girl was slightly ahead of Lady Thorn, who was leading the favorite half a length. Before the quarter-pole was reached Goldsmith Maid broke, and fell a couple of lengths behind the other two mares; American Girl passing that point half a length ahead of Lady Thorn in 36½ seconds. As they swept along the backstretch, the two big mares were trotting head and head together, and they continued lapped to the half-mile pole, which was reached in 1:09¾; Goldsmith Maid still a couple of lengths in their rear. The same close and magnificent struggle, between American Girl and Lady Thorn, was continued along the lower stretch; first one and then the other alternately showing her head in front; the favorite, who had made a second break after passing the half mile, being three lengths behind at the three-quarter pole; time 1:44. A finer race than that which ensued between Lady Thorn and American Girl in coming up the homestretch was never witnessed; it continued all the way to the score, and terminated in favor of Lady Thorn by a neck and shoulders; time 2:20¾.

SECOND HEAT.—The result of the last heat was to make Lady Thorn a hot favorite, for it was seen that she possessed the foot of her competitors, and had won the heat so cleverly that her chance of taking the race also was very rosy. In one pool she brought $900; Goldsmith Maid, $300, and American Girl (fallen from her once high estate) only $140. The original backers of Goldsmith Maid were eager to hedge, many trying to do so by betting on Lady Thorn, winning in three straight heats. A deal of time was cut to waste in scoring, there being no fewer than eight failures to get the word. This was attributable to American Girl breaking every time, her driver, Ben Daniels, jockeying for a good position. He got caught, however, for, coming up, as usual, in the rear, the judges cried "go," when Lady Thorn and Goldsmith Maid were side by side, two lengths before the Girl. As they went around the upper turn, the favorite and Doble's mare were head and head together, but as the quarter pole was passed, in 36 seconds, Lady Thorn had drawn half a length in front of Goldsmith Maid, who led American Girl two lengths. Along the back-stretch McMann and Doble went locked together like a double team but when they reached the half-mile pole, her ladyship showed half a length in front of the Maid, who led American Girl fully six lengths. Time, 1:09¾. On the lower stretch Goldsmith Maid broke, but she caught again quickly, and, trotting rapidly, was only half a length behind Lady Thorn at the three quarter pole, where American Girl was five lengths behind and apparently not trying for the heat. But it was on the home-stretch that Lady Thorn is always so dangerous, few being able to keep up with her long, low and powerful stroke on the last quarter. She now drew steadily away, and, trotting fast and squarely, came home a winner of the heat by five lengths, the same space separating Goldsmith Maid from American Girl who brought up the rear. Time, 2:20¼.

THIRD HEAT.—The bets now stood $150 to $25 on Lady Thorn, whose victory seemed assured. After repeated scorings they got the word, Lady Thorn and American Girl side by side a clear length before Goldsmith Maid. The two big mares went around the turn locked together, two lengths before Doble's mare. At the quarter pole American girl showed her head in front of Lady Thorn, who still led the Maid a couple of lengths; time 36 seconds. Along the backstretch a splendid race between Lady Thorn and American Girl ensued, both trotting like a double team, and neither apparently able to shake off the other, until on approaching the half mile pole, American Girl drew perceptibly away from her fleet footed opponent, and as they passed that mark in 1:09¾, she was three-quarters of a length ahead of Lady Thorn, who was a clear length before Goldsmith Maid. On the lower stretch, Goldsmith Maid closed on the leaders, and all three mares were in a cluster as they passed the three-quarter pole at a tremendously fast gait. As coming up the home stretch, where Lady Thorn is ever to be most dreaded, she let out an extra reef of speed, her long powerful stroke telling with effect, and drawing steadily away from her fleet rivals, she crossed the score a winner of the heat and race by six lengths, in the fastest time ever made on Long Island, viz.: 2:20¼. A fine race for second money, between Goldsmith Maid and American Girl, ended in favor of the former by a length.

When Lady Thorn and Mr. McMann, her veteran driver, returned to scale they received a perfect ovation of applause from the assembled concourse of delighted spectators. The veteran had driven Lady Thorn without a skip or break in any heat, and in faster time than she had ever made before. It was a proud day for the old horseman, and he evidently felt the gratification attendant on success. Summary:—

Great Trotting Performance of Dexter Under Saddle.

HE BEATS HIS OWN BEST TIME.

The readers of the CLIPPER are already aware of the steady progress in speed which the abdicated sovereign of the trotting turf, the immortal Dexter, is daily making. Good judges assert that from the vast improvement he manifests and his fine, free style of going, he is quite capable of excelling his own fastest record either in harness, to wagon, or under saddle, and the hope is generally indulged that his owner, Mr. Bonner, will, during the present fall, test his speed in a public trial on some one or other of the tracks on Long Island. That this hope will one day be realized we have good reason to believe, and we feel assured when Dexter does attempt to cut down his own best time a few seconds, or to wipe out Dutchman's unequalled three, shrewd and experienced trotting men, however, like Sam Hoagland, Oliver Marshall, Joe Elliott, and others, observing the mare's magnificent condition, fancied her strongly, and invested their greenbacks on her at the tempting odds she stood at in the pools, which Tommy Johnson sold on the track. AMERICAN RACING.—ENTRIES FOR STAKES AT JEROME PARK AND SARATOGA.—The prosperity of the future running turf in America is amply assured by the entries for the various stakes at Jerome Park and Saratoga, which have just closed. The Nursery Stakes for 1868, at the former place, a race for three year olds, has closed with 58 entries. As the entrance is $50 each, play or pay, with $1,500 added, this stake is worth the handsome sum of $4,400. The Belmont Stakes of 1871, for three yr. olds, $200 each, half forfeit, with $1,500 added, has 74 entries, and the winner of the race will pocket a little fortune. In the Champion Stakes of 1871, for three year olds, $200 each, half forfeit, with $1,500 added, there are 77 entries, just one more than the Belmont Stakes. The Ladies Stakes of 1871, for three year old fillies, $100 each, half forfeit, with $1,000 added, there are 73 entries. In the Mairowly Stakes for this fall, three miles, for four year olds, $200 each, half forfeit, with $1,200 added, there are only four entries:—Vauxhall, Bay Omet, Sanford, and Abd-el-Kader; but in the same stake for 1870 there are 22 entered, comprising such fast ones as Versailles, Vespucius, Tasmania, Pompey Payne, Helmbold, Cottrill, Hersog, Genelg, etc.; while this stake for 1871 has 36 entries. At Saratoga the same increase of entries is observable, the Tennessee Stakes for 1871 having 83 entries at $50 each, p.p., and $1,000 added, and the Saratoga Stakes, same entrance and value, for three year olds, has 47 entries. Racing is evidently flourishing in the north.

BASE BALL.

TOUR OF HAYMAKERS.

The Union Club, of Lansingburg, N. Y., otherwise known as the "Haymakers," left Troy by rail on the 21st ult., on a western tour, and reached Cleveland, Ohio, on the day following. On the 23d ult. they encountered the Forest City club on the Association grounds. We give the score by innings:—

	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Haymakers	6	0	5	6	1	1	6	7	2	34
Forest City	2	0	2	7	0	3	2	0	5	21

The next day they played the Independents at Mansfield and were again victorious, as the following score shows:—

	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th
Haymakers	6	6	6	4	3	7	12	44

HAYMAKERS vs. RED STOCKINGS.

THE GAME BROKEN UP—SCORE 17 TO 17.

The game between the Haymakers and Cincinnatis, took place at Porkopolis on the — ult., before a crowd of full ten thousand, the ground being literally packed, and a large proportion being ladies. Among these were excursion parties from all the western cities. The Haymakers were warmly greeted when they appeared upon the grounds, and, as has always been the case in Cincinnati, the applause was very equitably distributed. When the first innings ended so inauspiciously for the Cincinnatis, they were jeered considerably, and the Unions cheered. Some of the latter's good play, such as Bellan's superb catch in the first innings, was enthusiastically applauded. The unfortunate winding up of the game makes these statements apropos. The crowd began assembling at 1, or before, and the game was called a little before 3; John R. Brockway, of the Great Westerns, of Cincinnati, being chosen umpire. Just before commencing, the field was photographed, with the Red Stockings in the field, and Craver at the bat. The Haymakers won the toss and took the field.

The ball was opened by G. Wright (Bearman pitching and Fisher playing 2d), who made first on Bellan's slow handling, and stole 3d. Gould fell a victim to Fisher on a little fly. Waterman was caught at first by Bellan and McAtee. Allison drove a stinging liner to Bellan, who held it magnificently. G. Wright left on second, and no run. On the Haymakers' side, McAtee reached first on a safe hit to centre field, and made second when H. King reached first on called balls. Powers was fielded out at first by Sweasy's throw. Fisher was served likewise by G. Wright, McAtee scoring, and M. King getting his 3d. Flinn sent him home and made first by a hit to left. Craver advanced Flinn one bag by a like one. S. King sent both home by a heavy one to right centre, muffed by H. Wright on the run. Bellan's fly was muffed by Leonard, also running, S. King getting home. Brainard made a safe hit to centre, which was followed by a very bad muff. McAtee's little foul was outrageously muffed by Waterman, but Allison caught him nicely on a tip bound the next moment. Score, 6 to 0, and Red Stocking stock decidedly down.

SECOND INNINGS.—H. Wright made first on a bad muffed grounder by Fisher and stole second. Leonard was stopped at 1st by Powers' fielding to McAtee, H. Wright getting to 3d. Brainard was "called" to first. Sweasy sent Leonard to 2d and H. Wright home. Brainard home on passed ball, and Sweasy to 3d. McVey cleared the bags and made 2d by a corker to centre. G. Wright got just as far and sent Mac in, on a nice foul fair to left. Gould made first on a little grounder to second. Waterman took first on called balls. All the bases were now full. Allison advanced all hands two bags and took 2d, on a clipper to left field. Waterman then got in on a passed ball, with Allison to 3d. H. Wright made 2d on a safe hit to centre field. Leonard sent him home by a like run to same spot, getting his first bag, and stealing 2d and 3d. Fisher went in to pitch, nine runs having been made on Bearman. Brainard struck out, but Craver failed to catch it, and Leonard got home while the ball was passed to first. Sweasy fouled out—10 runs.....M. King went to first on three balls. Powers advanced him to 3d, and a passed ball made 1st in a fair centre field hit. Fisher was taken nicely on the foul bound and three runs, Flinn bagged home M. King and Powers, by a muffed fly, Flinn charged against Leonard. Craver hit to G. Wright, who sent it red hot to Waterman, putting out Flinn, who was trying to reach 3d. S. King made three bases on a very heavy hit to centre. Bellan sent him home by a hit past short, and then he got 3d on a passed ball. Bearman took three bags on a splendid hit to right centre. McAtee made his first on a safe daisy cutter. M. King got three bases on a fly not well judged by H. Wright. Powers drove a heavy liner to Waterman, who held it beautifully—7 runs. Score, 13 to 10.

THIRD INNINGS.—McVey was put out at first by Bearman's fly to Fisher snatched in G. Wright's foul fly. Gould took three bags on a fight field hit to centre, which bounded over Flinn, and then came in on a passed ball. Waterman followed, with the first home run of the game, on a bounder over S. King. Allison was fielded out at first by Bearman. Two runs.....Fisher was again caught on the foul bound by Leonard. Flinn was treated in like manner by Allison. Craver lifted a high foul, which Waterman muffed. Craver, however, was fled by H. Wright. A whitewash. Score, 13 to 12, in favor of the Haymakers.

FOURTH INNINGS.—H. Wright to first on called balls, but forced out at second, when Leonard hit to Powers. Brainard's fly stuck when it reached Flinn's fists. Sweasy got to first just in time on a little run to Bearman, and to third on a passed ball, Leonard scoring. McVey was stopped at first by Bearman. Sweasy left, and one run.....S. King tapped out to Allison. Bellan's foul fly was taken by Brainard. Bearman to first on called balls. McAtee sent him one bag further on a hit to centre. M. King popped up a fly to left short, which was handsomely taken in by Geo. Wright on the back run. No runs. Score, 13 to 13.

FIFTH INNINGS.—G. Wright went to first on called balls. Gould was taken on a sharp tip by Craver. Powers next muffed a high fly of Waterman's. The latter, however, was forced off by Allison and thrown out at second by Powers to Bearman. H. Wright made first on a short one to right, and Leonard sent him to third on a safe hit to centre field, on which he took first. Brainard on a fine hit to right field made second, sending Harry home and Leonard getting to third, from whence he stole in cleverly. Sweasy was fled by Fisher. Four runs.....Powers hit a hot grounder, which was handsomely picked up by G. Wright and fielded to Gould. Fisher got to first on a little run that Gould ran after, leaving his base vacant. Flinn to first on called balls. Craver sent the two home and made three bases on a heavy hit to left. S. King next made a home run on a hit to centre. Bellan fouled out. Bearman to first on a hit to left. Four runs. Score, 17 to 17.

SIXTH INNINGS.—McVey struck a foul, which was lifted on the bound by Craver, just as it touched the ground. The umpire called "out on it." Craver then called in the men and stopped the game. There was intense excitement in the crowd. Mr. McKeon, the president of the visiting club, claimed that there had been two wrong decisions previously, when Leonard stole his second and third. One of these was so close that any umpire would have been justified in giving the winner the donbt. In the other, at third base, Leonard was clearly out. A claim was also made that H. Wright was put out dealing decoud ; this was considered doubtful. As the last foul, Craver's hands went into the ground and threw up the dust. The crowd was divided as to whether he got the ball on the first bound or not. The CLIPPER correspondent, who sat with the scorers, thinks McVey was out, but it must be remembered that the umpire was facing to the field—it was a very quick, sharp tip—and, as Mr. Brockway turned, he could only see Craver jerking up the ball and a handful of dust together, was clearly an excusable error. The umpire had been very strict and impartial. Brainard had certainly been pitching fall as steadily as Bearman or Fisher, yet the men sent to first on called balls were the same in number (four) on each side. If a game is to be stopped every time an umpire bounders, how many games will be played out, and how long before the professional player, like Mr. Craver, will find his occupation gone? There were hundreds of people looking on—probably over a thousand—who had come long distances to see this match. They will not be likely to do so again. The game opened with sharp play by the Haymakers, and unparalleled muffing by the Red Stockings. In the last three innings the latter had got down so as to bring the score even, and, while the Haymaker were not batting as well as at first, the Reds had begun to take the measure of Fisher's roasters. Probably this is the secret of the indignation of Messrs. McKeon and Craver. Brockway is well known to visiting clubs. He is considered the strictest and best umpire in Porkopolis, and no one could suspect his honesty.

The excitement about the city after the game was very great. The presidents of the two clubs were "interviewed" by the local reporters. Mr. Champion, of the Cincinnatis, would say nothing, except that his nine "were content with playing a game without umpiring it." The Haymakers were to play the Buckeyes the next day (Friday), but decided not to, on account of the excited feeling, though Capt. Ruffin, the Chief of Police, sought them, and guaranteed them a quiet game. There was no demonstration against them, beyond the hooting of the boys. An amusing circumstance was occasioned by the fact that Mr. McKeon, the president of the Unions, was mistaken for Hon. John Morrissey, who had been incorrectly stated to be in town, by one of the daily papers. He received a great many witticisms on the strength of this.

The following is the score of the game so far as played. The game was given to the Cincinnatis by the umpire, after he had in vain ordered the Haymakers to proceed :—

FAIR AND FALSE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Now fresh and cool the air! The woods and glen
Rise like a spectral figure, dark and drear,
And echo back the merry dancers' laugh again,
While strains of music burst upon the ear.

The stars are twinkling in the cloudless space above,
And evening zephyrs softly o'er me blow,
The moon through tree tops in the distant grove,
Floods, with her full, rich light, the scenes below.

That is a happy throng within! Faces bright and fair,
And Hebe-like hands that rest on lovers' arms;
And one I thought as pure as snow, is there
With scores of lovers gazing on her cursed charms.

Once, she was sick and weary—glad to rest;
She shunned and sickened at the flattery of men,
And pillowed that fair head upon my breast,
While list'ning to my whisp'rings over and again.

And resting on my bosom did she lure,
While gleamed her lustrous eyes to truer ones above,
Her heart, that seemed so trusting, innocent and pure,
Wrung from my bosom a man's earnest, honest love.

And now? Look at her! She has lovers full a score;
Queen of the beauties! Fairest of the fair!
While I—an outcast, driven from every door—
A beggar and a tramp! The story's there.

Yes, an outcast and a beggar—tramp that steals,
A wallower in every depth of crime and sin!
Oh God, when will it end? My poor brain reels!
I cannot, dare not think of what I once have been!

Is there a hell, I wonder, for my wicked soul?
Is there a punishment I would not gladly hail?
The dreary life I lead has no apparent goal,
And should I die to night, who would bewail?

And when I'm gone, and shoved beneath the sod,
A pauper's grave, of course, will be the thing,
Will she be one of those to praise her God?
To stand with purer angels 'round the throne and sing?

Will she be clad in garments pure and white?
Or will she share a punishment like mine?
For she it was that wrecked me in my might,
That drove me rolling down the hill of sin and crime.

Ah well! a day of final reckoning must come,
Till then she'll win and conquer with her cunning art,
Nor even give a passing thought to him that roams,
A beggar and an outcast, with a broken heart!

W. H. S.

Dey gid oud early und eschoy der fresh air, und dot gifes dem headt und sdrength, und makes dem more heads for pisness all day long. Do you undershtood me?

Here is von of der risin men of der day, dis gendleman mit der black musdash drifing dis bay horse, Sharley, dis is Harry Murray, ex-Counciliman, und a brominend man in der 23d Vard. Harry is a gwied, easy goin gendleman, shrewd und indeligend, und knows schmeckly vat he is a doin. He is fery bopular mit der working glasses und is a man oi der beeple. He is connected mit his broder in der coke pisness in 42 sdreed and is madin money I dink. As a man he is ubright and honesd, as a friend drue as sdeel, und as a bohdician a defilish sighd doo honesd to efer make anyding oud of id. He is a brominend candidade for der bosition of Bolice Jusdice in der 8d Sdreed Jewdiciel Disdried, und I radder dink from all I can hear, und you bed, Sharley, I hear a goot deal, he vill gid der nominasshon. As a madder of cowrsely he vill be eleaded, und der beeple of dot disdried may be glad dot dey hafe such a man in deir disdried who vill accebd der bosition.

Hallo! I dought dis feller vas down at Tottenville mit der Manahatta Club, fishin for oysders und glams. Veil, sed, he is der lasd von I subbosded to see oud here on der road; of he sees us he vill drife in sure. Dis is like Conover, Sharley, und he is vat you can call "der saldo of der earth." He is mitoud excebtion von of der finesd gendlemen dot has efer peen my goot fordune to got ackquainded mit. Isaac is von of der olt shtand-bys, und I don'd peiecf dere is a olt shbort in der eidy dot don'd know him. He is der von dot keebs dot hodel on avenue 3 boud dwendy-fife feed from der corner of dwendy-dird shdreed. I shoose he vill gife me "rads" ven he sees me, cause I bromised him I vood go down to der Glub House dis summer und shbend a few days mit him und der balance of der gang of olt shborts down dere. Isaac has peen on der afenue a goot vile, Sharley, und of he vas to leef id, dot vood be like a man goin avay from his home. He is a goot feller und der longer you like him der bedder you know him.

Dis fine lookin' gendleman drifing dis dark lookin' horse mit a vite hat on—I mean der gendleman, nod der horse—is der Brincibal of der Bupils' School in Carmansfillage, Stinson McIvor, und a bedder hearded, ginder, goot nadured man aind any blace—he is liked by efery von dot knows him, und der shildren of der fillage, olt und young, shmall und leedle, speaks of him like dey vood of dey farders und moders. Mac is a fery bopular man, und some of der beeple in der Vashingdon Heighds naybordoot say dot he must hafe a bedder bosition dan der von he has now. Dey dalk of runnin' him for Bolice Jusdice of der new disdried, und of he don'd hafe any bad success in gidding der nomination, vill hafe "a valk-over." For any bard I vood like to see him in der bosition, und of he vill show me any vay I can be of any beind to him, I vill oney be doo glat enuff to helluh him at any dime. Sharley, of he gids do be der Jusdice, of you don'd look oud I vill got him to pud you "on der Island" for a couble vecks.

Hayes.—Sharley, dis is Misder William H. Hayes, Esq., der banker and broker. Dot is a shblendid deam he is drifing, und dey cood be made fery fasd of somepody vood look dem und show dem how. Dey are a couble Edan Allen coldts, but Misder Hayes he don'd bredend to be a drifer, conseykwendly he coodn'd make dem unfold demselfs. Sharley, dot Misder Hayes is a fine man und I like him. He is a goot man ad heardt, und I don'd peleef he vood vilifully do anyding dot he dought vas wrong. I hafe god so much confidences in him like I hafe in anypody und I dink more. Misder Hayes is von of der guns round Vall und broad sdreed, und sometimes salls in radder healy. His farder vas der sellerbraded Jacob Hayes, der High Coonsdoble of der city ad von dime. Didn'd you neler heard abound him? Misder Hayes leefs ad invood und he has a magneefysind blace dere. He dakes bood so much real comford as any von, und he goes down in der mornin vissling.

Sharley, dis is a nice feller, dis von coming down der break-neck hill road. Dis is Andrew Doane, Esq., der suberindendend of der Iron vorks ub ad Shbuyden Duyfil, und vat he don'd know boud iron und dings dot aind any use. He is a shbill, gwied feller, Sharley; he don'd say much, bud he dinks all der dime like der dooce. Andrew is a gind man, und many a leedle ding he has done "on der gwied," dot of der vorld knowed of id dey vood braise him for. I know bood so vell as anypody, Sharley, vat a nice feller he is, und I can made good for anyding he says. Sharley, vas you ever ub in dot Shbuyden Duyfil? You musd go ub dere some dime ven dere mill is runnin; ve'll go in der nighd, cause dot's der besd dime; ve'll gid Jimmy Norton und Johnny Mastin do blod us around und show us all der sigds. Dot "Shbike" dot use to vas a poody hard blace von dime, Sharley, bud it has degineraded und now dot's gwide resbectable. So dot's sdided; ve'll succeed in der "Shbike" some dime anoder.

Here is a shmard leedle feller, Sharley, und he is so nice as he is leedle. Dis is Billy Donnelly, von of der g'erks of der Board of Assisding Aldermans. Dot's a poody goot shdebber he has god dere, I cuess, und he looks as of he good made der cround fy poody likely unter his feets of he vanded do. Billy is a fine leedle man, und he is a gread deal dought of ub around vere he leefs, und, in fact, all oder der city. He use to vas boss of von of der fire-gangs in der Bald Fire Debardmend, bud der Commishioners gifed him a long furlough (unfoud pay), cause he voded der Democradic dicket. Billy is all righd, und of he leefs long enuff, vill hafe von or dwo of dem Commishioners plucking his boods—dey hafe done id before, und dey vill do id agin. You know der old sayin', Sharley: "Ub like a shky-rocked und down like a shd'ck." Well, you vait, dime vill dell. You voodn'd dink, lookin' ad Billy, dot he vas a hidder oud, vood you? Bud he is, dough, und he can go around a man "like a coober round a cask" ven he is varmed ub. Dot's so; you needn'd peleef id of you don'd vant do.

DO BEEN CONDINUED.

Rather Foggy.

"One day, off the coast of North Carolina," writes a Baltimore correspondent, "A. A.," "we got into a fog that lasted us the three day watches, so dense that we could not see the channel; the steamer cut through it three miles astern, like a new road cut through a cedar swamp. Lounging along forward, about 7 in the forenoon watch, I drifted in earshot of two jolly tars, as one of them put out a feeler in this wise:—

"'I say, Bob, did ye ever see sich a fog as this 'ere before?'

"'Ay, ay, mate, I have that; I've seen fogs down along the Table Banks, and about Cauao, that this 'ere stuff wouldn't be more than a bit of mist alongside of it.'

"'How thick was it, Bob?'

"'Well, once when I was in the old Rifleman, and we were goin' out to Quebec after deals, we run into a fog bank one day that carried away our jibboom and stove in our bulwarks. There was a lot of gulls and other big birds stuck fast all-ish among the fog, jest like sheep in a snow drift; the birds of them could move a wing. We'd been on allowance of water two weeks, and the carpenter sawed chunks enough out of that 'ere fog to fill every cask in the ship. It was tip-top water that fog made; but it didn't melt very fast. Some of it wasn't melted when we got back to Liverpool three months afterwards.'

"This was his story, and a mighty foggy one it was too."

TWO DARK THINGS.—Uncle Bill Tidd was a drover from Worcester County. Being exposed to all weathers, his complexion suffered some, but at the best he was none of the whitest. Stopping at a public house near Brighton, a man rich in this world's goods, but of notoriously bad character, thought, as Uncle Bill came in, he would make him the butt of a joke. As the black face of the weather-beaten man appeared in the doorway, he exclaimed, "Mercy on us, how dark it grows!" Uncle Bill, surveying him from head to foot, coolly answered, "Yes, sir; your character and my complexion are enough to darken any room."

A GOOD HELP.—The late Daniel O'Connell was of a tribe of drinkers who were known in society as three bottle men. One day he was taken to task by a lady of temperance principles. "They tell me, sir," s id the female reformer, "that you can sit down after dinner and drink off three bottles of claret." "Well, ma'am," said the great orator, "he who told you that story told you the truth." "Three bottles of wine! But, sir, do you drink all that claret without any help?" "Eh, ma'am, there now you have me. Not quite without help. To drink three bottles of claret I require the help of a pint of port."

NEGRO WIT.—"Pompey, why is a journey round dis world like a cat's tail?" "Well, I doesn't zactly see any semblance 'twixt the cases. "Well, den, I spose I hab to tell you. Bekase it am fur to de end of it." "But spose de cat's tail is singed?" said Pompey. "Oh! den in dat case," said the other, "it isn't quite so fur."

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

LIGHT LOVES.

PARKS AND SWEETHEARTS.

A correspondent writes, enclosing well authenticated particulars of a thrilling romance, the materials for which, including a dissertation on morals from a Chicago standpoint, would fill a small sized volume, and asks, in a tone approaching to indignation, why the Tribune don't write it up. "Is it not romantic?" says he; "and would it not be well to expose?" &c., &c.

"Alas! time's web is rotten, warp and woof." The age of romance is gone. Love affairs have lost their dearest charm. No lover now kneels before his mistress with his hand upon his heart, or lies down at her feet to utter things which make her wild heart beat while the moon hangs in the autumn sky. No maiden pines and dies because lovers are faithless. They go to the theatre, or tipple absinthe, or get married. If things do not turn out as they expected, they get divorced. A disappointment in love means the failure of a speculation. Only the disappointment is not so keen as in the case of many commercial failures, inasmuch as the entire capital is never invested in one venture. George cruelly deserts Belinda on the night before the wedding. The parson is ready, the feast is set, the guests are come, the lovely bride is waiting, but faithless George is speeding fast over the Union Pacific Road to drown his remorse in a week's dissipation on the Pacific slope. Of course Belinda faints; her brother swears; her elder sister knows she will never get over it; her female friends sympathize, and tell their own lovers how they would have such a wretch bored all through with red hot wires if he dared to treat them in that way. But does Belinda die? Ah, no. George returns in three weeks, and finds her comfortably married to a wealthy pork packer on the west side. She does not even tremble and turn pale when she passes him on the street. In a year he has the mortification of seeing a fat faced baby paraded in front of her house in a small perambulator, and he knows that that baby's mother—confound it!—is as happy as any other mother.

It used to be a popular belief that one could only love once, and many a poet has echoed the conceit. The Persians, or some other ancient people, held that souls were projected into existence in pairs; in other words, that all the marriages were made in heaven. They wandered through the world disconsolate, incomplete, until they met by chance, when they immediately got married. What would Prophet Young say on that question? Mormonism, philosophically considered, is the practical expression of a great truth. In a social point of view it may be a highly inconvenient system, that of polygamy, yet the theory upon which it is founded will be found to coincide with the experience of the majority of young men and maidens in all society. That a young man or woman is capable of being profoundly in love with two or more at the same time, is a proposition which scarcely needs demonstration. It is only "the social forms," as Tennyson says, "which warp us from the living truth." We stop short loving more than one when it comes to matrimony, because we are not able pecuniarily to support them. But while marriage remains but a hazy probability, the doctrine of "two souls with but a single thought" goes no deeper than the lips.

A man may believe for a time that he is incapable of loving any woman. But, having loved one, an unknown faculty is developed in him, and he proceeds to love two. Finding that he can love two as easily as he could love one, he extends his sympathies and takes on a third. It now becomes merely a question of capacity, and the thing may go on in a regular geometrical ratio, limited only by a simple question of supply and demand. If one should succeed in reaching the figure of a dozen, it would be almost an inevitable consequence that he should work his way up to twenty. And so on.

What is the use, therefore, of seeking to revive old prejudices by stigmatising flirtations as acts of rascality, or calling parties hard names because they get a divorce? Why dump up tears, idle tears, to readings of the heartless desertion, when we all know very well that the poor wounded hearts are healed before these tears are dried?

The romantic story which our anxious correspondent burns to tell, is a common-place story. It might be told of half a dozen young people in every avenue of this city. It is a tale of a fickle one and several fair ones, and may be condensed into small compass.

Wellington De Jones is the young man's name. The names of his victims are numerous, and will be charitably suppressed. He began loving in Rochester, N. Y., at a tender age. There is an advantage in commencing early. The youth acquires the art of committing himself, and, at the same time, evading all personal responsibility, an art which it is impossible to learn in maturer years. Wellington went on loving the fair young Miss S—— at Rochester for a long time, without receiving any love in return, and when she went to see her parents in Buffalo and he went to Syracuse to study law, he continued to love her. He wrote letters to her—gushing letters, calm letters, letters passionate, letters importunate, and letters long. They are not so original as Elisha Sprague's, and need not be published here. He describes his affection for her in the usual manner. He says:—"I have commenced several letters, but I hardly know what to write"—meaning, of course, that his love is inexpressible. He goes on to speak of a party, and says:—"I enjoyed myself very much, indeed, with the exception of one thing, and that is that I did not have the pleasure of your company, my dear"—which is a very graceful and novel way of declaring. He speaks of religion to her, and confesses that he is devoid of any "although I am a little inclined toward the Protestant religion." For all that he "would not mind taking a wife from the Catholic church, if necessary;" and if it came to the worst, "would, perhaps, join the Catholic church myself." Then he deplores his extreme youth, but endeavors to console her by the reflection that if he is too young to marry he is not too young to be engaged to marry. And then he comes to the formal declaration in this way:—"You may think I am not old enough to know my own mind, but if loving you, my dearest, is not knowing my own mind, then I do not know it."

The young lady was touched, and she finally yielded up her heart in the usual way. Then followed the dearest little notes, which only young ladies know how to pen. She wrote on beautifully tinted paper and said:—

"O darling one, how could I ever exist without you? The mail is just leaving. Excuse haste. I will send you a real long letter next. Be sure and write soon and tell me if you love me. From your own EMMIE.

"P. S.—The picture was beautiful."

When the course of true love is going on in this way, it is running smooth. Such letters touch us in a tender point. We re-peruse them a hundred times, trying to make them longer, as one might imbue a very small quantity of Bourbon through a straw to produce the effect of a spree. The correspondence was kept up for two years, after which the young lady came with her parents to reside in Chicago. That was a fatal step to her happiness. She found her Wellington here, but she found also that he was in the habit of boarding only a week at a time in one house. His landladies somehow tired of him at the end of a week. However, it was again in extenuation that the young man had but six dollars a week, and in the month of September last consent was given and the marriage day set. A new discovery concerning Wellington staggered her a little, and had the effect of putting off the wedding. He had already been married to a young lady in Syracuse. He promptly acknowledged the fact, but declared that he was not pleased with his wife, and had determined to select a better. The lady naturally liked his impudence, but declined the position. Upon declining she was thrown in a dreadful state of mind, and one of her brothers went about looking for Wellington, but he was not to be found. He had, in fact, borrowed money and was off for the west.

It has since been discovered that the young man had been going about marrying girls for a long time—marrying girls and borrowing money. He has victims scattered far and wide. One is in Oswego, one on West Washington street, Chicago, and one in Syracuse. They are all doing as well as could be expected. The keepers of several boarding houses, a few merchant tailors, a shoemaker, and many saloon keepers are said to have occasional tender thoughts of the absent young man.

Mr. De Jones is, in all probability, living at Salt Lake City. He will find there a more congenial atmosphere than even at Chicago. His strange story has a moral; let each reader interpret it for himself, and it will give universal satisfaction.

Meanwhile, it is to be noted that such occurrences are by no means rare, and that there is in this community a growing tendency in the young of both sexes to indulge in a multiplicity of loves. The multiplication of public parks, in Chicago, is, doubtless, answerable for it. If we had only one great park in the city, we could be contented with one girl. But where parks increase, it is but natural enough that loves increase also. If each division of the city is to be provided with a public park, and a band of music, and a bear, an eagle, a wolf and a coon, it is necessary that each division should, likewise, be equipped with a corresponding number of loves. Lincoln Park is attractive, therefore one must become acquainted with one in the vicinity of Lincoln Park. But it would never do to carry our Lincoln Park love over to Union Park. In the first place she would not be willing to go so far from home, and if she were, the expense in car fares would reach too high a figure. So it becomes absolutely necessary to look around us for some one near Union Park. We must also have some one with whom to visit the Lake Park, and if that delightful resort is torn from us by the act of the legislature, why, our sweetheart must go too, and the Illinois Central can court her if it chooses.

There may be found girlish hearts to whom the above theories may seem treasonable, and the above actions diabolical, but all women get cured of such notions after the first experience.—Chicago Tribune, Aug. 15.

LOVE, JEALOUSY, PISTOLS AND THE P. R.

One of the little "unpleasantnesses" which frequently arise between men who form an undying attachment for the same woman has just occurred in this city, and we hasten to chronicle the fact that, although both the combatants are considerably wounded, the result will not be utter annihilation. The case under consideration is one in which a German grocer and an American, a clerk in a ship chandlery, both have a yearning for a beautiful young lady, who has, thus far, shown no particular preference for either.

THE RIVALS FALL OUT—A BLOW.

Last Sunday the German lover, whom we will call Hans, called on the lady in question, and invited her company to Dr. Scudder's church in the evening. She accepted the invitation and named the hour she would be ready to accompany him. Toward evening the American, whom we will designate as Jonathan, called on the lady and settled himself in a chair by her side in a manner which indicated that he came to spend the evening. She told him that she had an engagement to attend church, but, as Hans was not at hand when the hour appointed arrived, she went with Jonathan. They listened to an eloquent sermon, and then started to return home. It seems that Hans had been belated, and, on finding that his rival had stepped in between him and the object of his adoration, he became exceeding wroth. He hung around the door of the church until the services were over, and then walked with heavy heart down the street. On glancing over his shoulder he saw the hated Jonathan, with the beautiful lady hanging on his arm. He immediately turned and confronted them, and hissed through his teeth to the fair one, "Nice woman you!" The words had no sooner escaped from his lips than Jonathan struck him a blow that sent him reeling into the gutter. Hans soon picked himself up, and, uttering in tones of thunder, "I'll pay you for that!" turned on his heel and walked away.

A CHALLENGE.

On Monday morning, before Jonathan was out of doors, a colored man came to the house with a note, on which was written:—"I'll fight a duel with you—name your friend." A gentleman called before he had finished his breakfast, and announced that he was Hans' "friend," and would make the necessary arrangements. The two started down town, and on the way called on a gentleman who, after a moment's private conversation with Jonathan, was introduced as his "friend." The two "friends" held a consultation, and arranged that Hans and Jonathan should fight a duel with pistols on Wednesday, in Alameda county. One of the friends was unexpectedly called out of the city on the day named, and the interesting event was postponed until yesterday.

TO THE FIELD OF CARNAGE.

At an early hour yesterday morning our reporter, while sauntering along the city front in search of items, saw four men, who were conversing in a low tone, at the Alameda ferry landing. They seemed to be greatly concerned for fear they were being watched. The appearance of the party gave such strong indications of an item that our reporter followed them on to the boat, and at 7.30 A. M. they started across the bay for Alameda. On the trip our reporter sympathized with one of the friends, and insisted on talking with him about the weather and the healthfulness of the climate. At length he convinced the man that he knew something was in the air, and that he would like to accompany the party as a spectator. The offer was accepted, after an assertion was obtained from our reporter that he was not a police or other officer of the law in disguise. By this time the party were ready to disembark. They jumped aboard the cars, and in a few moments alighted at Schutzen Park. They wended their way around to an open space in the grove, about half a mile southeast of the park, and here preparations were made for the duel. The solemn character of the meeting quite overcame the "friends," and they held a consultation to see if the bloody affair could not be avoided. The principals were growing more agitated every moment. At length the "friends" came forward and announced that, with the consent of the principals, the duel would be dispensed with, and the affair settled in accordance with the rules governing the pugilistic ring.

PUGILISTIC ENCOUNTER.

The hair-trigger pistols were placed back in the case, a ring was marked out on the ground and the rivals commenced to shed their superfluous clothing. Hans, who weighs about 160 pounds, stripped finely. Jonathan, who only weighs about 125 pounds, looked much inferior in point of strength, but what he lacked in "heft" was fully made up in agility. "Time" was called, and the rivals came promptly to the scratch. A look of deep hatred flashed from their eyes, and it was very evident that the contest was going to be a bitter and lively one. At first they were very shy of each other, and the sparring was anything but scientific. But they were not there to display their pugilistic training, they came for "blood!" Soon the blows commenced to fall thick and heavy, hitting anywhere between the top of the head and the knees being in order. The first round lasted about five minutes, and was terminated by Jonathan giving Hans a terrible blow behind the ear, which sent him to earth. He did not even kick after he fell, and the little crowd gathered round him with fear and trembling. He soon returned to consciousness, and on calling "time" came up promptly to the scratch. Twenty-three rounds were fought in the same awkward style, Jonathan proving in each the better man. The fight terminated by Jonathan getting Hans' head in chancery. Hans did not like this much, but he stood the punishment like a trump for about a minute, and then he cried:—"Nuff; go right away, now!" and lopped down upon the ground. Jonathan taking advantage of the situation by falling heavily on him. Jonathan was declared the victor, but he had paid for it all it was worth. Their faces were pounded out of shape and badly swollen. The blood was washed from their countenances, and with handkerchiefs around their heads the homeward march was commenced. The rivals agreed that they would go out of the city and remain until their bruises were healed, and that when they returned they would go together and visit the "innocent cause of the war," and abide by her decision.—San Francisco Times, Aug.

A HARD HEARTED SHYLOCK.—Frances Leonstein, a keeper of a house in Greene street, has sued Charles A. Vermeister for $5,030 damages for having defrauded her of her furniture, claimed to be worth that sum. She alleges that Vermeister offered to advance her $300 to pay a balance due on her furniture, and that soon after he forcibly entered the house, without legal process, ejected her from the premises, and took possession of the furniture, retaining it for five days, and then selling it for $2,000, the whole of which sum he kept for his own use. She charges that he is in the habit and makes a business of lending moneys to, and paying moneys for parties keeping houses of ill fame, charging exorbitant and usurious rates of interest, and, on non-payment, has illegally seized and taken possession of their furniture to an extent beyond the amount due. The defendant was caused to be arrested under the Stillwell act, and the examination is now going on in the Superior Court, before Judge McCunn. Mr. Vermeister claims that he foreclosed a chattel mortgage upon the furniture, and states that he is a wine merchant, worth $100,000. The plaintiff was in court, accompanied by a number of her "lady boarders."—N. Y. Sun, Aug. 26.

THE GAME OF CHESS.

To Correspondents.

GEO. E. CARPENTER.—Your correction in time, and observed, as you see.

W. A. SINKMAN.—The problems are received, for which you have our thanks.

WM. H. LYONS.—Solutions correct; thanks for your pleasant note.

SAM D.—Your are right; a Pawn becomes a Queen or any other piece chosen, as soon as it reaches the "royal rank," and a player can claim a Queen for every Pawn he succeeds in getting on the 8th square.

PROBLEM NO. CXXXII.

WHITE.—King at Q Kt sq; Queen at K B 4; Rook at Q R 7; Bishop at K B sq; Knight at Q 6; Pawns at Q Kt 2, and Q 2d.

BLACK.—King at Q Kt 6; Rooks at Q B 4, and K R 3; Bishop at K 3; Kt at K B 4; Pawns at Q Kt 5, Q 4, and K Kt 5th.

White mates in four moves.

Unsound.—1..Kt to K 4, answers equally as well as the author's move, 1..Kt to Q Kt 7. If Black 1..P × Kt, or R to Q Kt 4, White plays as in the intended solution. With the move of Kt at K 4, as above given, this problem becomes identical (to all practical purposes) with No. 3 ante. The attempt to pass No. 132 off as another problem is as strange as the oversight of the second solution which it contains. The latter version may be corrected by adding a White Pawn at K 4th.

PROBLEM NO. CXXXIII.

WHITE.—King at his R 4; Queen at Q R 2; Rooks at Q 8, and Q 5; Bishop at Q Kt 7; Knight at K 7; Pawn at K R 5th.

BLACK.—King at his B 5; Rook at K R 7; Bishops at Q Kt 5, and Q 2; Knights at K 5, and K R sq; Pawns at Q B 4, Q B 6, Q 3, K B 3, K B 6, K Kt 6, and K R 6th.

White mates in four moves.

Imperfect.—There is an unpleasant flaw in the leader, thus:—3..Kt × B +, K to B 4; 4..B to Q B 8, or R × K B P, mate.

PROBLEM NO. CXXXIV.

WHITE.—King at home; Queen at her R 2; Rook at K Kt 4; Bishop at K R 8; Kt's at Q R 4, and K B 6; Pawn at K 2d.

BLACK.—King at his 6; Rooks at Q Kt 4, and Q 2; Bishop at K Kt 3; Knights at Q Kt 8, and Q B 3; Pawns at Q R 6, Q 5, K 5, and K R 3d.

White mates in four moves.

Imperfect.—In the solution, as given, White's fourth move may be Kt × P, or Kt to B 4, mate. If, instead of 2..P to Q 6, Black play 2..R to B 4, to prevent this choice of moves, a still greater imperfection arises; for, 3..Kt (from B 6) +, R × Kt; 4..Kt mates on either of two squares: or 3..Kt (from Kt 6) to B 4 +, or Kt to Q 5 +, and 4..Kt mates. This problem bears a general resemblance in the handling of the Queen and Kts to numerous others of this collection. In No. 147, post, the author has availed himself of another idea that suggests itself in solving No. 134. The positions in each are nearly similar. It will be noticed, also, that the key-moves are the same.

(b) An unexpected but apparently sound coup.

(c) Had he a better move?

(d) Kt to K B 6 + would have yielded a good attack, but hardly enough, perhaps, to commensate the sacrifice of a piece.

(e) Apparently he should have equalized the force in Pawns by Q × Q, then B to K 7, and 29..B × P.

(f) Ingeniously conceived.

(g) All this is very pretty, but Mr. R.'s passed Pawn remains a stubborn fact, nevertheless.

AQUATICS.

HARVARD vs. OXFORD.

The great boat race between the four-oared crews of Harvard and Oxford came off, according to previous arrangements, on Friday, August 27th, and, although the cable has given us the result of that important aquatic contest, we herewith give another letter from our special correspondent in London, in order that all details connected with the training preparations and practice of both crews may be placed on the CLIPPER record for future reference, as well as for present perusal. Our special's next letter will give us a complete, reliable report of the race, together with many interesting incidents connected therewith:—

THE ANGLO-AMERICAN UNIVERSITY MATCH.

LONDON, Saturday, Aug. 14th, 1869.

EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.—The Oxford crew arrived at Putney on Wednesday last, and their appearance on the scene of action has naturally had the effect of investing the approaching great contest with a still higher degree of interest, as, from henceforward up to the eventful day, both crews will take their practice over the actual racing course, and we shall, consequently, have a better opportunity of comparing their respective style of rowing, and forming some idea as to their relative merits. Following the example of their opponents, the Oxford men, instead of "putting up" at one of the waterside hostelries, as is the usual custom with our University crews when training for a match on the London water, have taken a private house in the High street, just opposite the quaint mediœval mansion that was once the residence of the great Earl of Leicester, whom "Good Queen Bess" so delighted to honor. On the evening of their arrival they went out for a short paddle, accompanied by their "coach," Mr. George Morrison, in a small steam launch, and, judging from the general tone of comments in which the spectators indulged (among whom I observed all the Harvard representatives and a large number of the leading English oarsmen, both past and present), their first performance on the Thames appeared to create a very favorable impression. Their rowing certainly exhibited, in a very marked degree, all the familiar characteristics of the modern Oxford style—the lightning-like dart forward, the momentary "hang" just as the arms reach their fullest tension, the firm grip of the water the instant the blades of the oars touch the surface, followed by the massive backward swing, in which arms, body and legs are brought to bear simultaneously upon the stroke, each separate movement being clearly and distinctly defined, and y

THE RING.

A GAME FIGHT IN WHITE PINE

BETWEEN

Johnny Grady and Johnny McGlade, for $1,000 and Gate Money.

FOUGHT NEAR HAMILTON, NEV., AUG. 15.

GRADY THE VICTOR IN 35 ROUNDS, LASTING 2 HOURS AND 26 MINUTES.

A determined battle took place near Hamilton, Nevada, on the afternoon of August 15th, the contestants being Johnny Grady and Johnny McGlade, both of whom are well known all over the country, as accomplished artistes of the charmed circle. We herewith present full particulars, first giving a

HISTORY OF THE MEN.

JOHNNY GRADY was ushered into the world at Roscommon, Ireland, on Christmas day, A. D. 1844, stands but 5ft. 4in. in height, and in trim pulls down the scales at 130 lbs. He came to New York when very young, and was raised in the "Bloody Sixth," but for many years afterward resided in the 23d Ward, where he has plenty of warm friends. His accommodating spirit, from the time he was old enough to put up his hands, in lending assistance at exhibitions, as likewise his performances in the ring itself, have made his name familiar to the patrons of the circle and himself popular with them everywhere. Beyond a turn-up occasionally—once with Mike Carr, who fought Sam Collyer—Grady has not figured very extensively within the ropes, the present constituting his third engagement for money. His first opponent was Billy McMullin, the fight taking place in April, 1864, for $200 a side, at four days' notice. The battle was to have taken place near the Cayuga House, near the metropolis, but, as the beaks got wind of the affair, it was thought advisable to alter the fixture, and accordingly the party adjourned to a sporting drum in the lower part of the city and had it out there. Grady was handled by Reddy the Blacksmith and Patsy Nolan, McMullen by Billy Bennett and Mike Dorsey, with Ed. Kinney for referee. Fourteen slashing rounds were fought in thirty-five minutes, Grady disabling his right arm in the second, leaving him but one hand for the other twelve rounds, but he won the day, fighting up-hill all the time. At that time Grady was in fair health, having just returned from a two years' cruise in the navy, and he is said to have weighed 142lbs., while Billy was some 12lbs. or 15lbs. heavier. His next encounter was with Billy Kelly, who fought Teddy McAuliffe and Collyer. The match was made but forty-eight hours before it was decided, and was for $200. Johnny Carman putting up for his friend Grady, and Tommy Carter staking for Kelly. The fight took place near Bull's Ferry, N. J., on the morning of May 7, 1867, and, though fought right off the reel, as it was, proved one of the longest and most desperate battles upon record, no less than 120 rounds being contested in three hours and 18 minutes. A general fight took place at the end of the 118th round, and the referee, being unable to get the ring cleared, got into a coach, but did not leave the ground. The two succeeding rounds fought amid great confusion, and then, as the peace men among the out-siders continued, and sticks and stones were flying about promiscuously, the men shook hands and the battle was declared a draw. The manner in which they stood up to the rack and took their fodder proved conclusively that they were both out-and-out fighters, and placed them in the front rank of lightweights. Grady left New York for the Golden State, June 6th, 1868, and arrived in San Francisco in due time. After remaining there some time he went to Sacramento and commenced work, and at the time the match was made he was attending bar for Joe Coburn and Con. Mooney at Hamilton, Nevada, the White Pine district.

JOHNNY MCGLADE also acknowledges Erin's isle as his birth-place, although he has passed much of his life in and around Liverpool, Eng., and is going to and fro between that port and this. He was born in 1836, stands 5ft. 4in. also, and his fighting weight is 128lbs. Although no fights are accredited to his name in "Pistiana," we have been told that Johnny did once fight for a fiver near Liverpool, on a Sabbath morning, and won, but who his antagonist was, or anything more about it, we know not. McGlade was first prominently brought into notice here by his being matched with Johnny Roche, in the fall of 1860, but Roche was arrested and the stakes were drawn. McGlade's next public appearance was out west, with Jerry Donovan. They fought near Chicago, for $200 a side, when it took but seventeen minutes and nine rounds to dispose of Little Mac, on the 1st of July, '61. McGlade soon found friends to back him against Dan Smith, alias Young Bendigo, for $100 a side, which Mac also lost, the fight lasting one hour and twenty minutes, and forty-six rounds being contested, Dec. 39th, of the same year, and near Chicago, too. Luck seemed to be adverse with Mac in the western country, and beyond a turn-up with Pat McBride and one or two others, his name doesn't figure any more in the far west. The winter of '64 found McGlade once more in his old stamping grounds, and one night some "friend" of both parties succeeded in bringing the rival McGlade-Roche combination together in a room in the Fourth Ward, and there they had it out in ding-dong style, Mac dealing out some heavy right handers on Roche's ribs, and receiving some straight shots about the dial. Neither one was fit to fight, but of the two men, McGlade had the clearest head that night. To make a long story short they fought twelve rounds in thirty-two minutes and were then separated, leaving their difficulty still unsettled, this occurred in the month of November. In the year following McGlade was twice matched with Jim Turner, but by some peculiar method of legerdemain McGlade received forfeit on both occasions, in the first instance Turner's backers forfeiting $300 in a match for $1,000, and in the second match for $2,000, letting $100 go by default, the last curious act occurring in June, 1865. McGlade and Jack Turner have also been matched, and with almost like result, the only difference being that the affair was a draw after $50 a side had been posted. We next find McGlade engaged in an off-hand scrapping match with Hugh Riley, better known as "Butt." The two had a "growl," while waiting to see the Kerrigan and Phalen mill, and the ring being ship-shape, they off coats and went at it for satisfaction, fighting twelve rounds in twenty minutes, when "mutual friends" interfered, and it was declared a draw. This took place Jan. 16, 1866. McGlade's next encounter was with Dick Johnson, near New Orleans, for $300, Mac staking $200 to Dick's $100, and winning in thirty-eight minutes, fighting thirty-two rounds, April 30, 1866. Sam Collyer was now in the zenith of his fame, and as the metropolitans were smarting under his unexpected defeat of Barney Aaron, they looked around for some one to bring back the championship laurels to New York, and they hit upon McGlade as the man to make the attempt. He and Collyer fought for $2,000 and the light-weight championship, near Goldsboro, Pa., Jan. 15th, 1867, Sam winning in 47 rounds, occupying 55 minutes, and Mac not having a living show as far as the fighting went, though he had plenty of friends. His next and last engagement, previous to the one under consideration, was an off-hand affair with Jim Kerrigan, and took place in a room in the Bowery, this city. It was "understood" beforehand, and after fighting 43 rounds in 44 minutes, for a purse of $125, Mac, who was scarcely marked, "resigned," Feb. 15, 1868. A few weeks subsequently McGlade left for California, and has been in that section ever since.

THE PRESENT MATCH.

At the time that both the Johnnies were in Frisco efforts were made to effect a match between them, but they couldn't agree to terms. However, they both journeyed to White Pine, upon the breaking out of the excitement, and the chin music was resumed, finally resulting in the making of the present match a few weeks prior to its eventuation. The match was for $500 a side and the ring money, which amounted to about $1,500 more, the attendance being large. The ring was pitched in a very pleasant spot on the new Egan Canyon Grade road, and enclosed by Jim Miller's circus tent. Everything being in readiness, at 2½ o'clock Grady shied his hat in the ring, amid loud and continuous cheers. McGlade followed suit immediately after, when there was another outburst of cheers that nearly lifted the top off the tent. Both men and seconds then entered the ring. Grady was seconded by Joe Coburn and Charley McIntyre; McGlade by Harry Simpson and Barney Bradley. Bill Butler was chosen umpire for Grady, and Joe Morgan acted in the same capacity for McGlade; Henry Lyons, alias "Dublin," was chosen referee. Charlie Strong was time keeper. Grady left his corner and bet $100 with McGlade that he would win the fight, and after that his seconds wanted to bet $50 more, but McGlade did not have any more money. His backer, McCullough, however, brought forth his sack and said:—"Here's plenty more for any of you that wants to bet," and several hundreds more were bet on the outside. At 2.40 time was called for

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. After going through the usual hand shaking the principals and seconds retired to their corners, and being called, both went to the scratch and commenced sparring and eyeing each other for some time, when Mac sent out a feeler to see how the boy would take it, but it fell short. Grady made a feint, but the old one would not bite, and several were made on each side—"one afraid and the other dars'nt," for fear of losing first blood, McGlade got one on the boy's body and received one on the neck in exchange. There were several body blows on both sides, and Grady, in going down, received one on the nut that helped him to grass. This round lasted 10 minutes.

2. Both prompt to time, and commenced sparring around each other. After several feints, Mac got home on Grady's cheek with his right, and raised quite a corn under his eye, and then asked Coburn, "How he liked that for blood?" The face was bruised but no blood was visible, and Grady went down by slipping in trying to get away. This round lasted 2 minutes.

3. Both came up and eyed each other for some time, evidently hunting for some weak spot. They sparred and stopped still, until the audience became disgusted and commenced asking for beds to go to sleep. McGlade, having had the best of the fighting, seemed least anxious to renew the hostilities. Grady went for him, but received the worst of the punishment and got down after stopping Mac's right with his left eye. This round lasted 35 minutes.

4. Both cautious and a great deal of skirmishing; a little fighting and Grady hit him a body blow, when Mac's seconds claimed a foul, but the referee said go on. There was a great deal of in-fighting, a clinch, both separated and Mac got in low on Grady's body; another cry of foul from the boy's friends, but it was not allowed—they were told to go on and fight it out on their merits. Several hard blows were exchanged on both sides, the boy getting the worst of it, and getting down to avoid punishment. The round lasted 20 minutes. A rough and tumble fight occurred outside the ropes at the end of this round, which created considerable excitement, but resulted in nothing more serious than two bloody noses.

5. Good fighting on both sides, Grady forcing the fighting all the time, and getting the worst of it. He planted a heavy one on Mac's eye, drawing first blood, and got down in good style. Time, 5 minutes.

6. Grady went to work, a clinch, heavy in-fighting, both giving and taking in good style, and Mac was thrown. Up to this time the fighting seemed to be in favor of McGlade, and his friends were confident of success; but this fall seemed to weaken him, and also his friends, as it took nearly all the wind out of his sails. Time, 3 minutes.

7 and 8. These were both short, Grady going down each time to avoid punishment. Time, 1 minute and 1½ min.

9. Grady forced the fighting, and threw Mac heavily to mother earth. Time, 1½ minutes.

10 to 13. Grady had the best of all these rounds, Mac being down at the end of each. Time, 1½, 1¾ and 1½ minutes.

14. McGlade commenced fighting anew; he forced the boy to the ropes, some heavy fibbing ensued, and the boy slipped down, Mac not having strength enough to hold him on the ropes. Time, 45 seconds.

15 and 16. McGlade forcing the fighting, the boy short of wind and getting all the punishment, finally going down to avoid. McCullough offered to bet $100 on McGlade—no takers. Time, 1 min. and 1½ min. respectively.

17. Grady started with renewed courage, and forced Mac all round the ring, giving some heavy body blows, Mac at last going on his knees for a foul. The boy drew back his right, known as "Broadway," but did not leave it go, amid loud cheers from all parts of the ring. $100 to $75 on Grady, and no takers. Time, 3 minutes.

18 and 19. Both looked like Indian chiefs, painted for the war dance. Neither received much punishment in these rounds, Grady having the best of both, and Mac going down in each to avoid punishment. Time, 1 min. and 2½ min.

20. Mac got several good blows on Grady's face, and went down as usual. Time, 30 seconds.

21 and 22. Grady received severe punishment in both these rounds, and was knocked down in his own corner each time. McGlade stock went up to par again. Time, 30 and 20 seconds.

23 to 29. A repetition of the above, Grady down in every round; McGlade was the favorite now. These rounds lasted from 30 sec. to 1 min. each.

30. Mac was severely punished about the head in this round; his left eye was closed, and he showed signs of weakening, Grady falling down from over exertion at the end. There was great excitement on both sides, but Grady was the favorite in betting. Time, 1 min. 30 sec.

31. Mac commenced forcing the fighting; he forced Grady to the ropes, where he slipped down. Time, 1 minute. At the end of this round a slight altercation took place between Coburn and Bradley, which nearly ended the fight, but their better judgment prevailed, and the matter ended.

32 and 33. McGlade had the best of both rounds, fighting Grady to the ground each time, but, although badly punished, he was the favorite still. McGlade's seconds cautioned him from forcing the fighting and pressing Grady to his own corner. During this round Grady's friends were anxious to bet, but Mac's partisans had weakened on him. He looked around to see if he had any friends that would bet on him, and Grady took advantage of his carelessness, putting in a good blow on the neck, which was intended for the butt of the ear, and would have ended the fight in good shape had it went where designed. After this pass they had a brush and McGlade forced the boy down in his own corner. Even betting; time, 22 minutes.

34. Both fought hard, giving and taking all the way, and it was the best fought round of the fight. Grady at last got to grass to avoid further punishment, amid great excitement; time, 5 minutes.

35th and last. Both came up to the scratch and let fly together. Grady had the best of it. When time was called for the 36th round McGlade walked over to Grady and shook hands, saying that he was the best man; so "the Connemara Ran" was declared the winner. The total time occupied by the mill was two hours and twenty-six minutes.

RING FIGHT BETWEEN NOVICES.

HESPERIA VILLAGE, MICH., Aug. 17th, 1869.

EDITOR OF N. Y. CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—This morning our usually quiet village was thrown into great excitement by the report of a local prize fight, between two as smart "boys" as ever faced each other in the ring. The larger, Johnnie Sullivan, who is about 20 years old and weighs 155lbs., has been some time trainging with B. Smith, of Denver, the town adjoining this. Smith has quite a reputation hereabouts as being a striker from the shoulder. Sullivan prided himself on his science, but the sequel shows that even science and strength does not always gain the battle. Joseph Wright, who is known on White river as "Little Joe," has had but little training, and is about 21, weighing 133lbs. Latterly he has been under the wing of Sandy Southerland, a Scotch blacksmith, who claims to have brought his science from the Old Country; at any rate he has given Joe a number of good ideas. The unit was appointed at seven o'clock this A. M., and both men were on the ground ready for action. The usual preliminaries were gone through with, when a toss for choice of corners resulted in the advantage of Johnnie. At this stage of the affair our gamey little Joe caused a good deal of fun by offering to fight "rough and tumble," but we went to the grounds to see a prize fight, and prize fight we would see before the men came away. The affair took place in the corporation, on land said to be owned by Weaver & Son, of this place. In the circle Johnnie was seconded by Al. Wright and Ed. Robinson, and Joe by Bill Greigson and Sandy Southerland. Bill Jenkins, of Ohio, who is here on business, and has had a little experience, was chosen referee.

THE FIGHT.

Round 1. At the opening both men advanced with caution. Johnnie offered his hand to Joe, who took it and Johnnie gave him a left hander, which caused Joe's friends to claim a foul, but upon the case being given to the referee a decision adverse to Joe was rendered. After some shy sparring, Johnnie aimed a blow at the nose of Joe, but fell short and received in pay a left hander in the ribs, when they clinched and went down, Johnnie on top.

2. Johnnie led off, but Joe parried, not quick enough, however, to avoid a left hander on his right jaw. After some cautious fighting they again closed and went down, Johnnie on top.

3. Joe showed superior skill, and by several well directed blows in the face and on the mouth of Johnnie, caused his countenance to swell considerably, and first blood was given to Joe.

In all the succeeding rounds to the eighth the fighting was close and heavy, and a foul was claimed by Sullivan—not allowed. In the 11th round Sullivan received a severe blow from Wright on his nose, which took him off his pins and brought the blood from his mouth and nose quite freely. Bets were freely offered of 2 to 1 on Joe, but no takers. On the call for the twelfth round Johnnie wanted to withdraw, but his backer, Al. Wright, had some hard earned money on his head and would not suffer him to stop.

They continued up to the nineteenth round, Sullivan all the time receiving the greater punishment. In this round Sullivan tried to force the battle, and Joe, who was about tired of the fun, landed as pretty a blow as ever was seen on the hash organ of Johnnie, who came to his knees trying to get Joe to hit him foul, but the latter was game and refused to strike.

The twentieth round was called, but Al. Wright went back on Johnnie, and advised Joe to put him in a condition not to fight again, which instructions were followed up by Joe giving Johnnie a round-hander under the left ear, bringing him to earth, where he lay groaning and crying "enough." Thus ended as fine a little mill as ever came off in Western Michigan. Joe is round town this afternoon $25 ahead, while Johnnie has not been seen since he was taken from the ring by Ed. Robinson.

Yours, etc.,
AMATEUR.

TOM MCALPINE REDIVIVUS.—This boxer, of whom we have lost sight for some time, has turned up at Green Bay, Wis., where he publishes a challenge over the signature of "Tom Harrison," offering to fight Johnny Mulligan, or any other man in Manitowoc or Menominee, at 140 lbs., within fifty miles of that place, for $500 or $1,000 a side, four or five weeks from deposit. "Soap's" health is said to have been rather bad for several months.

A CORRESPONDENT informs us that Punch Morris, now stopping in Cleveland, fought a young fellow named Sidons (not George) near Fort Erie, Ont., on the 20th inst., for a purse of $150, the former winning in five rounds, lasting twenty-six minutes. Morris was seconded by Tom Daley and Fitzgerald, while Carney and a friend esquired Siddons.

NED O'BALDWIN arrived at Indianapolis, Ind., on the 23d ult., in company with Patsy Reardon, and they were to give a grand exhibition at Mozart Hall on the 28th, assisted by Dick Hollywood and other local lights of the circle. They are announced to proceed to Pittsburgh this week, the Nonpareil going with them.

WINNISIMMET vs. WILLOW.

The Willow Club, of Brooklyn, played the third and last of their games with eastern clubs on Saturday, 21st inst., at East Cambridge, their opponents this time being the Winnisimmet Club, of Chelsea, and suffered a greater defeat at the hands of the Chelsea men than had been inflicted by the Nonantum and Alpha clubs the two previous days. The Willows being short two men, enlisted the services of Messrs. Cashman, of the New York Club, and T. Linder, of the Nonantum club. The Winnisimmets, having won the toss, sent the Brooklyn gentlemen to the bat. The fine bowling of Eastwood and Kimball, however, with good fielding, kept their score to the low figure of 30, the innings not lasting an hour. The Winnisimmets began to score from the bowling of Crossley and Yoxall, the first wicket not falling for an hour. The batting of Eastwood, Burns Kimball, Mason and Farley was too much for the bowling of the Willows, necessitating the efforts of six bowlers before the innings closed for the largest score of the season, 185, after having lasted over four hours. The Willows, in their second innings, made no stand with the exception of Crossley, Yoxall and Jepson, who threw away their respective scores, the whole innings, however, footing up but 59, thus giving the game to the Winnisimmets in one innings, with 96 runs to spare. We append the score:—

ST. GEORGE vs. WILLOW.

At Bedford, L. I., on the 26th, the second elevens of these clubs had an interesting match, in which the "Dragon Slayers" were successful by the score of the first innings. In the second innings, which was not finished, the Willows made 77, and St. George had scored 42, with the loss of 2 wickets, when the stumps were drawn. The summary is given below:—

NEWARK vs. MANHATTAN.

The first match of the season between these clubs took place at Hoboken on the 24th. The Newarkers out-played the New Yorkers, winning by 109 in one innings to 89 in two. We give the score of the first innings on each side, which decided the match. After the defeat of the Willow and St. George clubs by the Manhattans, the winning of a ball from them by the Newarkers is quite a triumph for the Jerseyites. We append a summary:—

TOUR OF THE MUTUALS.

MUTUAL vs. NATIONAL.

The first game on the southern tour of the Mutuals was played August 26th, with the National Club, at Washington, D. C., before about 2,000 people, and, to the surprise of nearly every one, the ex-champions were defeated after a short, close contest. After the two crushing defeats of the Nationals during the previous week, at the hands of the Olympics, it was supposed that the Mutuals would have the game all their own way, and that they would make short work of the Nationals. Indeed, it is hard to tell how they won the game after making so many errors; yet, had they taken all the chances, or had they made no more errors than did the Mutuals, the score would have been three to one in their favor. Their fielding was very poor, while that of the Mutuals was good. Their batting was heavy, having no trouble in hitting Wolters, while the Mutuals, seemingly, could not get hold of Osborne. Up to the sixth innings they were entitled on batting to but one run. Gilbey made one very wild throw and some bad stops, but leads the score at the bat. The excitement and interest was at an extreme height at the commencement of the eighth innings, and continued to the end. Most of the crowd thought the Mutuals would make at least three runs in the ninth innings, and thus win the game, and considerable money was so staked; but sharp play of the Nationals put the side out in one, two, three order, and gave the Mutuals their fourth "whitewash." The umpiring was first class, being strict and impartial, and helped to shorten the game and give a zest to it. Below is the score:—

MUTUAL vs. OLYMPIC.

On the 24th ult., these two clubs had a contest on the grounds of the National Club, in Washington, D. C., and the Mutuals were badly defeated. Over 2,000 people were present, expecting to see a close game, and may have expecting to see the Olympics badly beaten, for it was whispered around that the game of the day before with the Nationals was only a feint on the part of the Mutuals, and that they were "laying" for the Olympics. So general was the opinion that the offers were one hundred to fifty on the Mutuals, and no takers. The Mutuals batted better than on the day previous, but their fielding took a slump, while the batting of the Olympics was terrific, and their fielding superior to that of the Mutuals. The practice of the Olympics with the "Red Stockings," and other strong clubs this season has tended to improve them, and they are now, in all respects, a first class club. The batting of Reach, the base play of Force, and the play of Malone behind, were admirable. The play of C. Mills behind was up to the standard of eleven of the twenty-seven on foul catches. In the fourth innings the Olympics, with two men out, batted for eleven runs, making a score of thirteen. A change was made in the fifth, by changing Wolters with Eggler; this last named was batted for seven runs in the fifth, but improved toward the close, putting out a majority on fouls. McMahon hurt his hand in this innings, and Clinton was substituted. A fine throw by Carleton and E. Mills in the second innings, Carleton taking Robinson on a fly, and cutting off Miller at first ere he could return. A majority of the errors made in the field was due to the elasticity of the ball selected by the Olympics. C. Mills and Reach made home runs, Mills' ball bounding fifty feet in the air in the left centre field, and going over the fence; Reach's was on a good hit over the centre fielder's head. The Olympics received one blank, while the Mutuals drew four. The game was not so exciting as that of the day before, being too one-sided; lenient umpiring also aided in making it drag wearily, the cry of "get them down," "over the base," "knee high," &c., taking the place of one warning and called balls. The following is the score:—

MUTUAL vs. MARYLAND.

The third game of the tour was played at Baltimore on the 25th, the champion club of the south, the Marylands, being opposed to the New Yorkers. When they came this way, a few weeks ago, the Baltimoreans defeated the Mutuals, and their friends calculated they would do the same thing on their own ground. The game opened favorably for the Marylands, and at the end of the first innings the score stood 5 to 1 in their favor. The contest up to the seventh seemed a close and exciting one, and caused the interest in the return game to be increased. The contest up to the seventh innings was very interesting, the Keystones having the lead by 13 to 9, but on the eighth innings the Mutuals, by good batting, made twelve runs, thoroughly demoralizing the Keystones, who were only able to make six runs in the last two innings, the Mutuals making twenty. The superior batting of the Mutuals won the game. The following is the score:—

MUTUAL vs. PASTIME.

The Mutuals made their second appearance in Baltimore on the 26th inst. On that occasion they met the Pastimes, formerly the crack club of the Monumental City. In 1867 the Pastimes defeated the Mutuals by a score of 47 to 31. The New Yorkers had gained a signal victory the day before over the then champions of the south—the Nationals, of Washington—the score standing 40 to 16, and feeling confident of walking away with the Pastimes, left two or three of their best players—Peters, Devyr, McMahon—out of the nine. With the recollections of the defeat still fresh in their minds, the Mutuals went into the game of the 26th with the determination to wipe out old scores. The Pastimes, although not so strong as formerly, made a good fight against their old opponents. The game was closely contested all through, but the superior batting of the Mutuals enabled them to score a victory. The following is the summary:—

MUTUAL vs. KEYSTONE.

The excursionists arrived in the Quaker City late on the night of the 26th, and on the following afternoon encountered the Keystones, on the latter's ground. The first game of the series was played at the Union Ground, on the 20th, on which occasion the Mutuals were victorious, with the score 31 to 18. About 2,000 persons witnessed the return game. The contest up to the seventh innings was very interesting, the Keystones having the lead by 13 to 9, but on the eighth innings the Mutuals, by good batting, made twelve runs, thoroughly demoralizing the Keystones, who were only able to make six runs in the last two innings, the Mutuals making twenty. Songs for the People.

In this department we intend to give, either weekly or from time to time, as space will permit, original songs, composed expressly for the CLIPPER, comprising sentimental, comic, Ethiopian, etc., which our friends are at liberty to make use of, as we do not intend to copyright them. Of the series, below will be found

EVA RAY.

Where the snow-white flowers are growing,
Smiling in the sunny vale,
And the gentle winds are sighing,
As they float o'er hill and dale,
Where the happy birds are singing,
In the sunshine, light and gay,
There now sleeps our little loved one,
Darling, little Eva Ray.
Chorus.—Down the woodlands birds are warbling,
Warbling o'er their joyous lay,
But we'll ever miss our lost one,
Darling, little Eva Ray.

While she lived, life was all pleasure,
Now we miss her from our home;
Lost to us, our dark-eyed treasure,
And in sadness now we roam.
But when all our griefs are over,
In the realm of brighter day
We shall meet our little loved one,
Darling, little Eva Ray.
Chorus.—Down the woodlands, etc.

ARTHUR W. FRENCH.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, August 30th, '69.

"THERE IS A TIDE in the affairs of men," observed Mister William Shakespeare, "which, taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." This tidy remark is called to mind by the late international boat race, when "our boys," a spruce set of blades, ventured to measure their spruce set of blades with those of the Oxford collegians. To say that the public mind has been deeply excited by this pass over the water, is to speak with truth; to say that we hoped our boys would win, is to put it in a mild form; but to assert that we are disappointed at the result, is not founded in fact. We have never been o'er-confident, and we bow in submission to the stroke which has been dealt us by the unfeeling adversary. It may be a trifling satisfaction for us to know that the advantages were all on the side of the Britishers, and "Hercules himself must yield to odds," you know, "and many strokes bew down and fell the hardest timbered oak," as the divine William once knowingly asserted. But the aquatic show is over—the curtain is dropped on the exciting scene, and the victors will henceforth live in story as the pride of old England's heart. To paraphrase the lines of brother Goldsmith:—

And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew,
That one small boat should carry such a crew.

.....Let us now lift the curtain on things more gratifying to our sense of pride, and show to the world the men and women of all nations as they are scattered over our great theatrical circuit, bringing joy and gladness to the hearts of some, tears to others, and peace and hope to many more. And first, we show you the "Sea of Ice," not in northern regions running, but under Western auspices, and the glories of which are Herne. [To understand this pretty little conceit, the reader must know that Miss Western has presented us with a "Sea of Ice" at the Grand Opera House, under the direction of Mr. Herne. When you once become posted in our way of getting off such puns, you will not have much difficulty in picking them out by the way.].....Then there is that great blower J. Levy, who will shortly give his last levee in this city and start for other cities to puff himself into the public's good opinion. And speaking of this, can you tell us why Mr. Levy is like a Chatham street boot black? No? Why, because he's a great corn-eter [Corn-eater is the word intended.].....Joseph Jefferson continues to take his nightly nap at Booth's Theatre, as Rip Van Winkle. Such a wink'l do him a great deal of good by the time he gets through. [In this instance we join on the word Winkle. See?].....They have in rehearsal at Niblo's Boucicault's latest sensation of the "Railroad to Ruin." Has this any reference to the Erie road? [Biting sarcasm and irony.].....After the present week, at the Olympic, Mr. G. L. Fox will be taken out of the dry "Dock," and be given a deacon's position in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," where tears will flow from the upper tiers, and the parquet (park-ers) will run with lachrymal weeping. If you can make this out, well and good. Jim says there's a flaw in it, but we tell him it's only the parquet floor.].....At the Tammany, they are running the fairy extravaganza of the "Queen of Hearts," but the reigning Queen of Hearts at that house is Pauline Markham, who is not, however, Paul(in) the "Pet of the Petticoats." There are none so blind as those who will not see..... Chang, the Chinese Giant, has been appointed overseer at Wood's Museum; while his pretty wife, Kin-Foo, under-takes to assist him.....All these things are quietly submitted, hoping that they may prove mutually advantageous in filling your hearts with joy and our pockets with the equiv.....And now, having been thus prosy, we shall change our policy, and, with a philanthropic turn of mind, thus in vivid and not too enticing colors portray the

There was a gal in our street,
Not many years ago,
Who did the household chores at eight,
And would for—later go.
And after that it would tramp to school,
And 'mongst her friends was known's
Sairey Ann Melias' Jerushy
Juniata Jones.

Now Sairey, as she crowed apace,
Growed fair and handsome too,
And was promote to help betimes
The family wash to do;
And every night to dancing school,
Across the gray flat stones,
Went Sairey Ann Melias' Jerushy
Juniata Jones.

At last some talent in her heels
Her dancing master spied,
And got her an engagement o'er
The regular boards to glide,
Where, dan ling from the wires aloft
With toward qualms and groans,
Swung Sairey Ann Melias' Jerushy
Juniata Jones.

Bright visions of uplifted state
Her grandma's mind did cross;
For highest lady in the land
She wouldn't give a toss,
For in the corps de ballet now
A salaried place she owns,
Does Sairey Ann Melias' Jerushy
Juniata Jones.

But one among those gamey youth
Her glimpses of virtue,
Who drops behind the scenes at night
To chat between the acts,
And drains a frequent sparkling glass
Among his pards and crones
To Sairey Ann Melias' Jerushy
Juniata Jones.

But now the gas lights and the paint,
Late hours and all that,
Have done their work, and she begins
By daylight to look flat,
And much it grieveth us to say
That him for whom she moans
Cut Sairey Ann Melias' Jerushy
Juniata Jones.

And now succeeds the saddest part
Of this pathetic tale;
A foreign count he snapped her up,
And did to wed prevail;
And, O it saddens us to think
He much be screwed in loans
From Sairey Ann Melias' Jerushy
Juniata Jones;

Till tired of supporting of
The load, and busted quite,
She gave her lazy lord the slip
One happy "farewell" night;
And now she charms and piques by turns
The heirs of foreign thrones,
Does Sairey Ann Melias' Jerushy
Juniata Jones!

....."Our Jim" has a queer way of saying things, even on familiar subjects. For instance, when he came to us at the close of last week for his usual stipend, he cast his eyes slowly down, and said, right before an assemblage of the elite of the city, "Give the devil his due." Being a little vexed at the time, we probably uttered a naughty exclamation when we looked at him. It was "O the devil!" James, who is never abashed before people, gravely remarked that he agreed with us—we did owe the devil.".....A rattling affair will take place at the San Francisco Minstrels to-night, when the end man plays his bones. And, by the way, the European trip seems to have benefited our fat friends, whose jollity will now be more contagious than ever.....Speaking of the famous "fatted calf," about which folks talk so much, it can be seen any windy day on Broadway, where it always goes in pairs. Of course there must be good stock in there.....Talking about amusements, the other day, the editor of a Boston paper declared that "swinging is highly injurious to the health." Ah! that depends on who swings you; if it is the sheriff, then the exercise is unhealthy.....Miss Susan Anthony is down on man and wife sleeping together. What can she know about it, any how?

THE END.

"Our Jim," who's humor's as keen as a knife,
Says that most men are born at both ends of this life:
They are born when at fir t inio being they come,
And when life is ended, they are borne to the tomb.

City Summary.

THE WAVERLEY THEATRE re-opened on Aug. 23d, as a variety place of amusement, under the management of Clint Eddy, with Louis Zwisler in the box office. On the opening night the house was crowded, and the attendance kept pretty good up to Friday evening, when there was quite a falling off, the house being about two-thirds filled. In the company are three old favorites, but taken on the whole the party is not a strong one, nor was the entertainment presented the past week first class, or up to the requirements of what a variety place should be on Broadway. In the palmy days of "Old 444," Manager Butler gave just such an entertainment as was popular, for he secured the best performers to be found in the profession, and by keeping up a constant succession of new faces and new acts, did a big business. With the recollections of how good a show was then given, and the excellent one now offered by Tony Pastor, in the Bowery, the management of the Waverley have to contend and to compete with the two variety places at present open, and they must secure a better company and give a better show if they expect to make the Waverley a success. Lew Brimmer is one of the best banjo players in the business, but he did not appear to be in the "playing mood" the night we were present, and his performance was rather tame. The Wallace Sisters are two young ladies who are very smart for their age. They were taught by Hogan and Hughes, and they do a good clog dance and the double song and dance of "The Belle of Fourteenth Street," imitating their tutors in action pretty closely. The Clinetop Sisters appeared in two dances. The first was called on the bills an "Union Medley," but the music was all from Lingard's songs. As danseuses they are fair. Gus Williams, a comic vocalist, sang an old man character song, which did not appear to take, for Dan Collins has done it here so often and so much better that it was no novelty. He also sang a song on the sorrows of a married man, to the melody of "Up in a Balloon." The words were rather pleasing and his vocalization was good. His attempt, however, to sing a Dutch song was a failure, for he has neither the dialect nor the action. Ella Wesner should quit doing a song and dance in boy's clothes, for she makes a bad attempt. Eva Brent sang two sentimental songs, which were well received. Eph Horn appeared in two acts—"The Locomotive Darkey" and "Recollections of the Old Plantation." Eph is an old favorite, but he is beginning to wear on his audiences. We recollect seeing the act of "The Locomotive Darkey" about thirteen years ago, and Eph does it just the same to-day as he did then. His business has not changed the least, and we believe he has the same old "trowsers" and carpet bag. His great fault is, he keeps the stage so long that he wears out the patience of his audience and kills his act. If he would cut out about two thirds of his dialogue it would be better for himself and his audience. Annie Hindle made her first appearance in this city, dressed in male attire and sang some something of the Lingard type. She makes up well, but has a voice that is by no means a pleasant one. Her business is rather taking, if her singing is not. Dick Carroll, an old favorite in this city, appeared in his act of "The Dancing Master," in which he does some very clever dancing, and in Irish songs and dances, and met with a favorable impression.

"DREAMS"—one of Boucicault's latest productions—is in active preparation at the Fifth Avenue Theatre.

JOHN BROUGHAM, accompanied by John E. McCullough, arrived in this city from San Francisco during the past week.

UNCLE FRANK BROWER was in town several days the past week.

THE LONG PROMISED SPECTACLE of the "Sea of Ice" was presented at the Grand Opera House on Aug. 23d, with Lucille Western as Louise De Lascours and Ogarita; James Herne as Don Carlos; E. L. Tilton as Henri De Lascours; Robert McWade as Barabas; Blanche Bradshaw as Diana, and Mrs. Bradshaw as the Countess. This romantic drama was last produced in this city, so far as making a feature of it, by Laura Keene, at her theatre on Broadway, on Nov. 5th, 1857, with the following cast:—Henri De Lascours, Charles Wheatleigh; Carlos, George Jordan; Barabas, Mr. Jefferson; Jean, Mr Peters; Horace, G. W. Stoddard; Louise De Lascours and Ogarita, Laura Keene; Marie, Mary Bullock; the Countess, Mary Wells, and Diana, Miss C. Thompson. It enjoyed a successful run of forty-two nights. Its present revival at the Grand Opera House has been marked by a most careful preparation and it is given with a cast good in some particulars, while it is weak in others. Lucille Light's play writing has no wonderfully descriptive of its character—a strange compound of all the antagonistic elements gathered from every quarter of the dramatic world, thrown indiscriminately into the theatrical cauldron. It abounds with so many dramatic beauties, startling incidents and thrilling scenes, that it can claim rank with any drama whose cognomen entitles it to a more legitimate position in the scale of legitimate literature. The story is full of interest, and the characters and events, arising out of the catastrophe in the Polar Sea, throws around it a romance and legendary interest, materially increased by the painter, the machinist, the costumer and stage appointments. The illusion in the second act, where De Lascours and his family are thrown amid a sea of ice, in the polar regions, with the storm raging violently around and the sparkling light of the Aurora borealis thrown across the heavens, was fairly presented. The first appearance of the aurora borealis is generally in seeming showers of falling rays, like those thrown from a rocket, not having, as represented here, the appearance of regular darts or acute angles. The third, fourth and fifth acts possess much interest, and afford the actors some opportunity of displaying their talents. The good points of Ed Borden, in the brief act, was a magnificent scene, and reflects great credit upon the artist. The mechanical business is well managed; the breaking up of the ice and other scenes are triumphs of artistic skill, and form a most effective and touching tableau. Several of the characters were well played, particularly those of Ogarita and Don Carlos, by Miss Western and Mr. Herne, and the spectacle has been so well presented that it deserves a better run.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MINSTRELS open their season, at their hall on Broadway, opposite the Metropolitan Hotel, this evening, with the following company:—John Mulligan, Frank Kent, Johnny Queen, W. Blakeney, W. Richards, E. J. Hartigan, J. Juch, G. Clarendon, W. D. Corrister, M. Ainsley Scott, Billy Emmett, Ira Paine, Bobby Newcomb, Billy West, Billy Birch, D. S. Wambold, W. Bernard and Charley Backus.

MARIETTA RAVEL closed her two weeks' engagement at the Old Bower Theatre on Aug. 28th, and is followed this week by Mary Mitchell and John Albaugh.

"ARRAH NA POGUE" continues the attraction at Niblo's Garden, and is nightly witnessed by enthusiastic if not large audiences.

THE FRENCH is the last week of "Hiccory Diccory Dock" at the Olympic Theatre, as it is to give place to "Uncle Tom's Cabin" on Sept. 6th. The Kirsily Troupe close their present engagement with "Hiccory," but will be retained by the management for the speciacle to follow "Uncle Tom."

THIS is the last week but one of the summer season at Wallack's Theatre. John R. Owens, who has been attracting pretty good audiences the past week to witness his inimitable performances of Joshua Butterby and Solon Shingle, closes his engagement on Sept. 4th.

THE OLYMPIC will open its fall and winter dramatic season on Sept. 6th, with the production of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" cast as follows:—Uncle Tom, Asa Cushman; Deacon Perry, G. L. Fox; George Harris, G. K. Mortimer; Simon Legree, J. B. Studley; St. Clair, George Jordan; Marks, C. K. Fox; Phineas Fletcher, E. T. Sinclair; Geo. Shelby, James Charles; Haley, H. Cunninghan; Tom Loker, Mr. Lewis; Topsey, Mrs. G. C. Howard; Eva, Miss Alice Cushman; Eliza, Ida Vernon; Ophelia, Mrs. T. J. Hinds. New scenery has been painted for it, and it is thought that it will enjoy an extended run.

ANTON RUBINSTEIN, one of the greatest of living pianists, is coming to America this fall or early next year.

STEPHEN MASSETT—Jeems Pipes—has just issued his circular of lectures for the ensuing winter season. Subjects:—"Sixty Minutes Chat about China and Japan," and "My Lecture." The American Literary Bureau, 132 Nassau street, this city, has the exclusive right to make engagements.

JOHN HUNTLEY is a name that has been associated with American theatricals for the past thirty-five years, having been connected with all the theatres of note on the Mississippi river and in this city. He has played under the management of James Caldwell, Ludlow and Smith, Felt, Burton, Niblo, Hamblin and Pratt and Maywood. Having done good service in his time, and now growing old, he has made up his mind to settle down in this city the remainder of his days and devote his time to a dramatic agency, having established one at 636 Broadway, where he hopes to meet all his old friends, and solicits the patronage of all who require the services of an agent. See his card in another column.

MR. DALY continues the performance of "Play" at his pretty little Fifth Avenue Theatre, and with each representation there is an improvement in the acting, as the artists become more familiar with their parts. Mr. Daly commenced his season about three weeks too early. The only change that has been in the cast since our last is the withdrawal of Agnes Ethel, in consequence of illness, and the appearance, on August 27th, of Fanny Davenport in the role of Rosie.

ROB'T M. DE WITT, publisher, 13 Frankfort street, advertises that he has copies of several standard plays for sale at popular prices.

A GOLD MEDAL was presented to Messrs. Bernard, Wambold and Backus during their late visit to England. It is the size of an old fashioned silver dollar, upon which is inscribed the following:—"Presented to (here follows the name) on the occasion of his visit to Europe, by Messrs. G. W. Moore, J. P. Crocker and Fred'k Burgess, proprietors and managers of the Original Christy Minstrels, St. James Hall, London, as a slight token of their sincere and cordial friendship and of their high appreciation of his sterling talents as an artist. London, July, 1869." Each one of the above performers received a medal, and the inscription was the same.

THE CENTRAL PARK CONCERT, at 4 P. M., on Aug. 28th was largely attended, owing to the lovely weather and the dulcet notes anticipated.

WOOD'S MUSEUM commences its dramatic season this afternoon, with a performance of "Masaniello," introducing the Zavistowski Sisters, Alice appearing as Alphonso, Emeline as Masaniello, and Christine as Fenella. The cast also includes Lizetta Bernard as Lorenzo, Mr. Morton as Elvira, G. C. Charles as Silva, and Mr. Marsden as Pietro. Previous to this will be given the comedy of "The Water Nymphs." In the evening, "The Pearl of Savoy" will be given with the following cast:—Marie, Miss Rosa Rand; Couchon, Miss Olivia Rand; Arthur, Mr. T. W. Keene; Loustalot, Mr. Frank Evans; The Commander, Mr. Rooney; Pierrot, Mr. J. M. Ward; Father Leduc, Mr. W. M. Fleming; Laroque, Mr. Manley; Jacquot, Mr. Barnes; Chariot, Mr. Marsden; Francois, Mr. De Boney; Antoine, Mr. Collins; La Fleur, Mr. Florence; Servant, Mr. Brooks; The Marchioness, Mrs. Phillips Barry; Fanchette, Miss Valery; Susette, Miss De Witt; Annette, Miss Brown; Mme. D'Elbee, Mrs. Jackson; Frank Evans; The Countess. In addition to this department of the Museum, the living and dead curiosities are well worth seeing, the most prominent of which are Chang, the giant, and his wife Kin Foo, Admiral Flake, the dwarf, and many others.

THE ASSOCIATED ARTISTS of Kelly and Leon's Minstrels were in St. Albans, Vt., on Aug. 24th and 25th; Brandon, 26th; Rutland, 27th and 28th, and were to go thence to Whitehall, N. Y., for the 30th; Glenn's Falls, 31st, and Troy, Sept. 1.

COOL BURGESS has been engaged at the Howard Athenæum, Boston, for three months.

DUPREZ AND BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS, who are to locate in Philadelphia, on the 18th of October, have taken the advice of the CLIPPER, and make their first part a great feature, there being six singers engaged for this part, viz:—Gonsalvo Bishop, Sig. Vandenhoff, Frank Dumont, Warren Richards, L. R. Hicks and J. L. Woolley. The orchestra is said to be the largest in any minstrel company. Lavalee is musical director. Frank Kent, the prima donna, left on Aug. 24th, to join the San Francisco Minstrels. Wilkes, a prima donna from Hooley's taking his place. Several new comedians will be added to the company for the opening night in Philadelphia. The present route of the troupe is up the Hudson, then to Rochester, through Canada, and back to Philadelphia. We are glad to notice that a concert is to be made a feature in the opening.

LOUISA MOORE, who will be remembered by her truly natural performance in "After Dark," when produced at Niblo's Garden, but who was suddenly called to England, in consequence of the death of her sister, returned to this city on Aug. 24th.

HARRY JACKSON arrived in this city, on Aug. 26th, from San Francisco.

BERNARD, WAMBOLD AND MR. AND MRS. BACKUS returned from Europe on Aug. 24th.

S. C. CAMPBELL returned from his European tour on Aug. 24th.

ANNA SWAN, the Nova Scotia giantess, the Circassian girl, and Major Hansen, arrived from England on Aug. 27th. This party have been very successful in Europe, having visited all the principal cities in England, Ireland and Scotland, under the management of Judge Ingalls, who intends to return to that country in November with Anna Swan, the Siamese Twins and other novelties.

ALICE PLACIDE, accompanied by her mother, arrived in this city from New Orleans on Aug. 25th.

"A LIFE'S REVENGE" is the title of a sensational three act drama announced for production at the Theatre Comique this evening; also the farce of "Nan, the Good for Nothing." Mons. Cellini makes his first appearance here this evening in a dance with Mlle Diana. The drama of "Don Cæsar de Bazan" was produced at this establishment the past week, with George Boniface as Don Cæsar and Lillie Eldridge as Maritana, and the weakness of the company was never so apparent as in this piece. There are a few good people in the company, but some do not possess enough ability to do justice, in the roles in which they are cast. Miss Eldridge is hardly up to the requirements for the position of leading juveniles, and when she attempts to play such characters as Maritana she shows to what an extent she lacks power and ability. Lizzie Willimore was cast for Lazarello, but did not do justice to the character. She plays some boys' parts very well. D. E. Ralton appeared, for the first time at this theatre, as Don Jose, and was acceptable, as was Mr. Boniface as Don Cæsar, but the balance of the cast was rather weak. With his present company Mr. White cannot expect to do any better business than he has since his opening, and he will either have to strengthen with the addition of a good leading lady or play stars.

"PATRIE" will be revived at the Grand Opera House on Sept. 13th, with Lucille Western as Donna Dolores, and Jenny Gourley as Donna Rafaela.

DAN BRYANT takes a benefit at Niblo's Garden on Sept. 3d, when he appears as Handy Andy and Shaun the Post.

TONY PASTOR presents one of the most attractive programmes this week, to the patrons of his Opera House, that has been offered in the variety line for a long time. In addition to his already large, talented and attractive troupe, he has added Delehanty and Hengler, clog dancers, two of the best in their line in the business. Maude De Lasco is also engaged, and will shortly appear.

MAD. ANNA BISHOP and Charles Lascelles arrived on Aug. 29th, after a four years absence.

KATE BATEMAN, accompanied by her father and mother, sailed from Europe on Aug. 28th, and are expected to arrive here on Sept. 7th.

YANKEE ROBINSON'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS will be on exhibition in this city, on Broadway, this winter.

"FORMOSA" will be presented at Niblo's Garden, on Sept. 6th, with the following cast:—

Formosa.....Miss Kate Newton	Bob Saunders.....W. Holston
Mrs. Boker..Miss Annie Lounsdale	Earl of Eden.....Ada Harland
Nellie....Miss Isabelle Freeman	Sam Boker.....Harry Pierson
Mrs. Dudley.....Miss Sherrill	Compton Kerr.....Mr. Fitzgerald
Tom Burroughs..C. B. Thorne, Jr	Dr. Doremus.....Mr. Bradley
Cobb.....Miss Hardy	Major Joram.....C. H. Morton

CHARLES PETTENGILL, the Delevanti Brothers and Sheridan and Mack appear at the Waverley this evening.

N. D. ROBERTS arrived in this city from the west on Aug. 30th.

YANKEE ROBINSON is in town.

THE TAMMANY presents the same programme this week as marked that of the initial week with but few changes. Harry Gurr, the man who, while under the water, eats, drinks and smokes his pipe with apparent ease, can be now seen on the stage of the main theatre, as his performance was too good to be confined to the small saloon down stairs.

THE SUGGESTION offered by us a few weeks ago, to the effect that steps should at once be taken to give the widow of J. G. Hanly, a benefit, has been acted upon, and arrangements have been made for a grand complimentary testimonial to take place, afternoon and evening, at one of our leading theatres. While living, Mr. Hanly was an active worker in the legitimate, and now that his widow is in want, it is but right that those managers under whom Mr. H. appeared should show their appreciation of his valuable services.

FROM SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., our correspondent, "C. de L.," under date of Aug. 18th, writes as follows:—"John Brougham's last week at the California Theatre, proved a complete success. Lights and shades were written by him during his stay in this city, gained for him fresh laurels. It boasts of the same fresh and healthy tone, the same startling incidents that characterize all his productions. The burlesque of 'Much Ado about the Merchant of Venice' was brought out last Wednesday, and was received with well deserved favor. As you are aware, it is full of pointed puns, and Brougham, as Shylock, is capital; the scenery is new and beautiful, and the costumes, and the support excellent. Saturday evening, being Brougham's last in this city, was set aside for a complimentary benefit for genial John, tendered him by the leading citizens. The house was crowded, and the old hero made an appropriate speech. After the performance he was presented with a valuable gold cigar case by the members of the company. The presentation took place in the green room, and Harry Edwards, as chairman, read and made a very neat little speech. Brougham was unable to respond; his feelings got the better of him, and a flood of tears was to the givers the most eloquent speech, the most heartfelt thanks that he could offer them. And thus ends Brougham's engagement—a complete success, as regards his professional ability, his rare genius; not so, however, in a pecuniary point of view. He will be followed by the entrancing Lotta, our little California pet—that wonderful embodiment of music, laughter and life, who came out last Monday in 'Little Nell.' Long before the time of commencing, every available space was occupied, and many persons had to be turned away. She was received with rapturous applause, and was called before the curtain at the end of every act. She has improved wonderfully since her departure, but has preserved her freshness, her youth, her appearance. The best proof of the pride which we take in this little child of our soil may be found in the fact that the house was filled by the most refined audience that can be found in the city. The piece was produced in a capital style, and the support, with few exceptions, was faultless. Mr. Raymond's Dick Swiveller was one of his best efforts, and the little Marchioness may be pronounced perfection. Mrs. Judah, as Mrs. Jarley, acted with her wonted truthfulness. She is one of the ornaments of the American stage; a better 'old lady' cannot be found within the borders of our land. Grandfather Trent, by Mr. Harry Edwards, was very good, but the rendition of Sampson Brass by Mestayer was an exaggeration; it was evident that he had not the trouble to read 'Old Curiosity Shop.' I must not forget to mention the well deserving praise, John Wilson's David Quilp; he succeeded in making the character sufficiently disgusting, and that is a feat not often acquired. Lotta made a hit, and her engagement may be set down as an undoubted success.....Lemingwell has brought out 'Billiards' at Maguire's Opera House. Milton Noble made his first appearance last Monday as Stephen Sample, and was well received. [We learn that Mr. Noble withdrew after the first night.—ED.] Sue Robinson and W. Barry belong to the company.....Johnny Thompson's Minstrels have taken possession of the Alhambra and will keep up for one week. Next Monday Elise Holt will open a burlesque season, and will probably secure the services of Emma Gratton, who is expected to arrive to-morrow. The name of W. Burditt, as proprietor of the theatre, has given place to the name of O. H. Nixon. Prof. Maximilian, the ventriloquist, is supporting the minstrels.....Dan Castello's Circus have reduced their admission to half price (50c). This is their last week in this city; they will perform at Sacramento during the coming fair.....Tom Thumb and party made their debut at Platt's Hall last Monday, and have been visited by large numbers of people.....Tommy Jefferson, from Kelly and Leon's Opera House, New York, arrived here, from the east, on Monday, and will play at one of the principal theatres next week.....Sig. Carmini Morley's benefit, last Thursday, was a complete success.....Geo. Francis Train left for the east last Monday.....John Brougham took his departure for New York yesterday.....Harry Jackson takes a farewell benefit at Maguire's Opera House, next Friday, previous to his departure for the east, under engagement to the Parepa-Rosa troupe.....Wallace and Vincent's Minstrels and Variety Troupe are about to visit Eureka, Humboldt Bay. They took passage in a sailing vessel yesterday.....Inter-Ocean Items.—Rhoades and Taylor have leased the Academy of Music, Sacramento, and are compiling a company in San Francisco.....Sallie Hinckley is playing 'Under the Gaslight' at the Hamilton Opera House, of which she is lessee.....From private advices I learn that the Buislay family are at the city of Mexico, and afflicted with a bad case of can't-get-away-activeness. They have been traveling with the Alnn and Bell families; but the poverty and misrule of that wretched country have made success impossible.....John Kelly, the well known violinist, and master Willie, have given a concert at Piper's Opera House, eulogised by the local journals of that place.....Murphy & Mack's Minstrels appeared at the Opera House, Virginia City, last night to a full house. Performance ordinary. They hold forth again to-night, and to-morrow start for Salt Lake.....A correspondent in Virginia City gives the following description of the performance by the Emma Forrestell party:—'Last evening Miss Emma Forrestell, the wonderful female contortionist, gymnast, etc., put in her first appearance at Piper's Opera House, to a very fair audience. She was assisted by Master Tommy McLaughlin, a very good jig dancer, and Billy Wilkinson, a tolerable Ethiopian actor. She is the whole attraction, however; her two companions could not draw a corporal's guard. She can tie knots in herself, scratch her off ear with the toe of her near leg around the back of her neck, and stand more pounding from a fourteen pound hammer smashing huge stones on her breast, besides other rough usage, than any other woman I ever saw. She is a wonder of India rubber suppleness, and, like Tom Thumb, is just from the east. You will see her soon.'"

THE CHAPMAN SISTERS were announced to open in Louisville, Ky., on Aug. 30th, at Weisiger Hall, for one week, with a burlesque company.

JAMES F. SHERRY commences his regular traveling season at Reading, Pa., on September 6th, with the following company:—Mrs. Julia Blake, leading lady; Dollie Pike, soubrettes; Mrs. S. A. Baker, first old women; Annie Montford, walking ladies; Miss Annie Stevens, utility; Little Clara; James F. Sherry, leading; John Ferris, heavies; O. W. Blake, low comedian; J. H. Mulligan, juveniles; Frank Montford, old men; M. J. Jordan, character; T. T. Rainey, second low comedian; T. E. McSorley, C. A. Zimmerman, Thos. De Witt, L. O. De Witt, Wm. E. Oughton, Chas. Ogden, Chester C. Lay, H. H. Redmond, and L. A. Barker. Agent—John M. Sherry. During the State Fair at Harrisburg, Brant's Upper Hall will be occupied by Sherry's New York Theatre.

ACTORS are wanted for McKean Buchanan's company. See card.

"HUMPTY DUMPTY" makes his bow on the 6th at the Opera House, Buffalo, N. Y. New scenery has been added, and Mons. St. Ody, the maitre de ballet, will have charge of that department of the piece. Eilsler's ballet troupe will constitute the leading feature. The regular dramatic season will be inaugurated by Mrs. D. P. Bowers, on September 20th.

ANNA MORRIS, supported by J. E. Nagle, commences her tour about the 20th inst. Managers are requested to address as per advertisement.

SEVERAL people are wanted, for the coming season, by "Manager," whose address find in another column.

PHILADELPHIA, after having heard and read so much about Lydia Thompson, her golden locks, gurgling laugh, and all that, is now having an opportunity to see and jude for itself, the troupe opening at the Arch Street Theatre on Monday evening, Aug. 30th, in "Sinbad the Sailor." But the present troupe is not really the original party, who first showed at Wood's Museum; for, of that company, the peerless Markham, the gushing Weber, the clever Harland, are now among the absentees, the present organization being composed of Lydia Thompson, E. Weathersby, Emily Pitt, Bessie Sudlow, Mary Pitt, Messrs. Harry Beckett, W. B. Cahill, and M. Connolly as musical director. Prices of admission—Orchestra seats and reserved seats in orchestra circle and dress circle, one dollar; orchestra circle and dress circle, fifty cents; family circle, twenty-five cents; private boxes, eight dollars. A portion of the press has been assailing the troupe with much bitterness, but as such assaults have the effect to draw attention to the company, the lovely Lydia will, no doubt, profit by these tender regards of the press.....The regular fall and winter season at FOX'S AMERICAN THEATRE commenced August 30th, although the house has been kept open all the year round, attracting remunerative audiences, even in the warmest portion of the summer, which must have been very gratifying to the management. George Edeson's new play of "The Female Sharpshooters" having made a favorable impression, will be kept on the bills, introducing the Zouave March and Drill by twenty-four young ladies, and other attractive features.....Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watkins, who opened at the WOOD'S MUSEUM Theatre on Monday evening, 23d of August, although not drawing large houses—as the warm weather was much against them—have been well received in their own plays of "Trodden Down," "The Pioneer Patriot," etc. This is the closing week of their engagement, Mrs. D. P. Bowers opening on Monday evening next, Sept. 6th, in a new drama called "Marguerite the Wanderer.".....The THEATRE COMIQUE continues to meet with liberal patronage. This week the "Old Curiosity Shop" is to be given, with Miss Rosalie Jack as Little Nell, and Mr. J. H. Jack as Grandfather Trent.

MELISSA BRESLAU, leading lady, advertises that she is prepared to accept short or long engagements.

J. BROWN, advertises that he can be engaged as property or utility man.

TOM COLEMAN'S DRAMATIC COMPANY are giving performances at West Bend, Wis.

FRANK J. WHITCHER, late business manager for McKean Buchanan, was in Milwaukee the past week; also Miss Maude Adrien, late leading lady of the same company.

THE MORRIS COMBINATION was announced to close its stay in Montreal, Canada, on August 28th. Miss Pateman took a benefit on August 25th, when a good house was in attendance. "The Lancashire Lass" was presented, with Marion Taylor as Ruth Kirby, and Mr. Pateman as A Party by the name of Johnson. On the 26th, "Paris," and "The Monkey and the Man O'Warsman" were given.

THE COMPANY engaged by manager Everett, for the Griswold Opera Troupe, Troy, N. Y., are called for rehearsal on September 15th, at Troy, and the season will open on the 20th, at Glenn's Falls, N. Y., where the party remain eight nights, and go thence to Troy, opening the regular season there on September 29th. Fanny Prestige, who was engaged for the Tammany, this city, but who did not appear owing to some misunderstanding, has been secured for Troy, as soubrette.

EDWIN FORREST'S income last year, as per published statement, was $26,807.

J. S. BERRY, vocalist and comedian, with new specialties, advertises that he can be engaged.

MINNIE JACKSON has been secured at the Chestnut Street Theatre, Philadelphia, for soubrettes for the coming season.

JAMES A. OATES, having leased the Opera House, St

strel entertainment was commenced, and the clearing out of those who had not paid. A man named Jake Killyon was found secreted under a seat. He was told by one of the ushers to come out, and pay or leave. At this he got up and sat down on a seat. While this was happening, Mr. Lake came up, and, being told the trouble, turned to Killyon, and told him to "get out of there," at the same time taking hold of his collar, and calling upon his men to put him out. Killyon, at this, drew his revolver, which was immediately wrenched away from him, and he was put out at the door of the canvas. After Killyon was put out, it is said he made several threats that he would kill Lake if he could get a revolver. A few minutes after this, Killyon came up to the doorkeeper, and, pulling out his wallet, remarked that "he was not a quarrelsome man, and was willing to pay to go in." While he was in the act of paying, Mr. Lake came out through the passage way towards the doorkeeper. As soon as Killyon saw him, he slipped among the crowd at the door. Just at this moment Deputy Marshal Bailey (who had heard there had been a difficulty, and that a revolver had been drawn) came up from town and inquired "who had that revolver?" Mr. Lake immediately replied that "he had it, and would deliver it up to-morrow morning to the proper authority." While they were talking, Marshal Bailey and a Mr. Thompson were standing facing Mr. Lake, not three feet from him. Killyon again approached from behind Thompson, and throwing his revolver over Thompson's right shoulder, shot Mr. Lake, the ball entering about three inches above the right nipple, coursing apparently downward toward the heart. Mr. Lake staggered a few yards and then fell down on his hands, and said:—"My God, boys, I am killed; carry me home." He was immediately carried to his room in the Southwestern Hotel, but expired almost as soon as it was reached. As the moment the shot was fired a panic seemed to infect the bystanders, and they all scattered. Killyon immediately turned and ran. As he did so, his foot caught in one of the guy ropes and threw him upon his face, and his revolver was accidentally discharged. He promptly jumped up and disappeared. During the day, though the town was full of people, there was no disturbance of any consequence. Everything was peaceable and quiet, and, during the performance in the afternoon, though the canvas was crowded to its fullest capacity, the audience was as orderly as an audience of the number could be. The name of the evening performance, with two or three exceptions. These exceptions were of men who had apparently been drinking, and who occasionally disturbed the audience by "calls" on the performers. They were, however, generally silenced by the sharp repartees of one of the clowns. The minstrel performance was the scene of the only difficulty. It seems as if Killyon was determined upon some rascality, and that he was countenanced in it by three associates. After his revolver was taken from him, some of them furnished him with another, with which the deed was done. The excitement and horror which this atrocious murder produced was most intense and profound, and could the dastardly perpetrator of the deed have been captured, he would have been summarily lynched. Parties immediately started in pursuit, but at last accounts had not been heard from. An inquest was held, and the following verdict rendered by the jury:—"That the said deceased, William Lake, came to his death by a shot from a pistol in the hands of one Jacob Killyon." Jake Killyon is about 24 or 25 years of age; about 6 feet 1 or 1½ inches high; slim in figure, with light brown hair, forms complexion, and is blind or nearly so in his right eye, the socket of which is sunk deep in his head, and is badly disfigured. He lives about ten miles southeast of Granby, near the Big Spring. Of late he has been engaged in running a threshing machine. The funeral service was to take place on Aug. 23d, under the auspices of the Odd Fellow's Lodge, of which order Mr. Lake was a member. One thousand dollars reward is offered for the apprehension and delivery of the said Jacob Killyon to the proper authorities of Granby, by Mrs. Agnes Lake.

BAILEY'S MENAGERIE opens in Louisville on the 22d of Sept.

JOHN ROBINSON'S CIRCUS exhibits at Indianapolis, Ia., on Sept. 3d.

JAMES ROBINSON'S CIRCUS pitches tent at Indianapolis, on Sept. 3d and 4th.

GEORGE F. BAILEY'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is billed for Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 4th; Brazil, 6th; Newcastle, 7th; and Indianapolis, 8th.

CHARLEY NOYES' CIRCUS exhibited at Gallipolis, Ohio, Aug. 28th, to good business.

FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is in Iowa until Sept. 12th, when it intends to ship to Ohio direct per R. R.

AMES'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE will be in Pittsburgh, Pa., on or about Sept. 20th.

DE HAVEN'S CIRCUS showed in Salem, Ind., on Aug. 26th. A correspondent, writing from thence, says:—"They are traveling by rail, and have done a good business since they have been in this State. The company go from here to New Albany, thence to Jeffersonville, Ind. Mr. James Reynolds, the clown, joined this party Aug. 20th, also the Hunting Family. They have one of the best railroad shows I have ever seen. The company receive a new canvass at Jeffersonville, Ind. Charles Fish, the rider, is to join the party soon. Charles Myers, with his educated hog, has the side show."

FRENCH'S CIRCUS is traveling through Massachusetts taking in all the principal towns around Boston this and next week, but does not go into Boston.

JOHN ROBINSON'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is traveling through Maryland, on its way to Washington and Richmond, making the first place on or about Sept. 9th, for two days, and the latter about Sept. 25th. A correspondent says:—"You will see by the present course that the destination of this concern is south, of which section it proposes to make every accessible and available point. It is already enlarging for the campaign, and is now one of the most formidable establishments on wheels. A horned horse was added, with some other rare and lesser attractions, on August 21st, which go to make up a zoological display of sixteen well filled dens of wild animals and tropic birds. Mr. Robinson, in addition to this, has negotiated for a white Lama and other attractions, which will combine one of the best menageries that have been south or west. The last natural specimens are expected in Washington. The leading feature of the procession this winter will be a magnificent band chariot, costing from $6,000 to $7,000, and drawn by forty cream horses, two abreast. In the front, beside and above the driver will be mounted Robinson's great Bengal tiger, supposed to be the largest specimen on exhibition in this country. In the centre, on each side, will be placed an African leopard, while in the rear in niches, as are the others, will be unpinnioned a pair, male and female, of African lions. This glittering and startling feature of the procession to be made in nearly every city and town this coming winter, will be received by the circus in Richmond. The already excellent circus department, containing Cordelia, Mons. Franconi, Mlle. Francis, Master Hank, Mons. Wilson, John Lowlow, Frank Robinson and a host of arenic talent will be largely augmented."

WILSON'S CIRCUS, in California, got badly used recently while showing at Almaden; the tent was cut and the performers stoned, Wilson getting struck on the eye. One of the rowdies attacked a member of the company with a knife, but a revolver weakened him.

AT A PERFORMANCE OF LENT'S CIRCUS, in Portland, Oregon, on the 10th ult., the money box, containing three hundred dollars, was stolen.

YANKEE ROBINSON is fast making his way eastward, and will be in Oswego, Syracuse, and Springfield, this week. On Aug. 23d, Mr. Robinson took his mammoth establishment to Honeoye Lake, a small village near Canandaigua, and containing a population of only two hundred persons, men, women and children, and, strange to say, the Yankee had the largest crowd that has been seen in his large pavilion at any day show this season. The secret of this is, it was the birth place of Mr. Robinson and the first time a circus company has visited the town in forty years. Mr. Robinson says it is a great compliment.

CAMPING OUT appears to be getting more popular with circus companies every season. Managers are compelled to do it, for in some places they cannot obtain sufficient accommodations for either man or beast, while in other towns the demands of the hotel proprietors are so extortionate that they cannot submit to them. French, the European and Yankee Robinson are taking care of their own stock under canvas, and intend next season to make the same arrangement for their men, and before the next season is over no doubt all the large concerns will have made arrangements for camping out every horse and their entire force of men. It will be a great saving to managers, more than one-half, not to mention the great convenience it will be to have the men and horses in close proximity to the show lot.

CIRCUS ITEMS IN BRIEF.—Hot weather has struck the shows hard. Gardner and Kenyon's Menagerie, with James Robinson's Circus, is drawing the masses in Northern Indiana, and is advertised to be in Indianapolis on Sept. 3d and 4th. The weather has been rough on the stock the last three weeks.....Hemmings, Cooper and Whitby were compelled to hold up ten days in Iowa, to give their horses rest and wait for the roads to get better. .....George Bailey lost nineteen days in the same region from similar causes, besides $10,000 worth of horses..... Charley Kenyon has not suffered much, owing to judicious management of his stock. The shows all seem to be steering for Indiana and Kentucky, and Indianapolis the great point of concentration. George Bailey's Circus and Menagerie is to be there a few days after James Robinson.....De Haven has just left the devoted city. The business throughout Indiana has been great, notwithstanding the thermometer has been up among the 90's for the last fortnight. So writes a correspondent who appears to be posted as regards the circuses in the west.

LENT'S NEW YORK CIRCUS is on its homeward travels, and will reach New York early in September. The concern will take in the principal towns in the oil regions, stopping at Meadville on Sept. 6th.

CAMPBELL'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE will be in Herkimer, N. Y., on or about Sep. 4th.

JAMES ROBINSON'S CIRCUS AND GARDNER AND HEMMING'S MENAGERIE show in Indianapolis on Sept. 4th and 5th, and is followed closely in the wake by George F. Bailey's Circus and Menagerie on the 8th. The route of the Bailey show is Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 4th; Brazil, 6th; Green Castle, 7th; Indianapolis, 8th; and thence down to Louisville, where they are to be Sept. 22d to 26th.

FRENCH'S CIRCUS pitches tent in Haverhill, Mass., on Aug. 27th.

SPOWN'S CIRCUS exhibited in Sparta, Wis., on Aug. 16th.

FOREPAUGH'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE will be in St. Louis, Mo., on Sept. 6th, for one week.

HEMMINGS, COOPER AND WHITBY drive stakes in East St. Louis, Mo., on Sept. 6th.

THE BENSLEY BROS., gymnasts, advertise that they can be engaged.

CARLOTTA DE BERG, the dashing equestrienne, advertises for an engagement for the fall and winter season, as will be seen by an advertisement.

Miscellaneous.

HEYWOOD AND CHIRISKI'S COMBINATION is reported to be doing well in the small towns of Massachusetts, performing under canvas. A correspondent says:—"At North Brookfield there were so many on the seats that the planks broke down and the greatest excitement prevailed. The concern was billed for Palmer August 26th; Warren, 27th, and Oxford, 28th."

THE WATSON BROTHERS' COMBINATION is traveling through New York state. During their performance in Skaneateles, N. Y., on Aug. 23d, two bracket lamps on one side of the stage fell to the floor and were broken. The oil caught fire, the flames shooting up to the ceiling and causing a momentary panic among the audience. The flames, however, were put out, and order restored, when the performance was continued. These young men appear to be rather unfortunate in their travels, for they met with another accident in Auburn, N. Y., during the past week, in the fall of the youngest brother, when performing his feat of throwing a somersault in mid air. The somersault from hands to hands was done, but in attempting the other, from the hands to the rope, there was a miscalculation of distance, caused by the inexperience of the rope holder below, and the gymnast fell a distance of full twenty feet, striking his breast against the corner of the stage, and then cutting his face against one of the foot lights. He was helped immediately upon the stage, and an examination of his wounds proved that they were not apparently serious, but if he is not disabled for a long period it will be a very wonderful escape.

THE DE LAVE COMBINATION, consisting of Sig. Constantine, Frank Girard, Luke Schoolcraft, Billy Allen, Dan Morris, Lina Windle, Evaline Constantine, Joey Morris, Viola Howard and others opened in Detroit, Mich., on Aug. 21st.

BRAINARD'S HALL, Cleveland, O., has been recently improved and is advertised to rent for operatic and dramatic performances.

CASE HALL, Cleveland, O., can be engaged for concerts, lectures, etc. See advertisement.

ROBBERS' OPERA HOUSE, Hartford, Conn., which the proprietor states is fitted up in the most approved modern style, is advertised to let.

THE TWO HEADED GIRL is to exhibit in Providence, R. I., on Aug. 30th and 31st.

MCALLISTER, the magician, passed through Milwaukee, Wis., on Aug. 24th, en route for California.

M. JOHN DENIER'S BENEFIT in Milwaukee, Wis., on Aug. 21st, is pronounced a great success. He gave an elegant gold medal to the best turner on the horizontal bar. There were twelve gymnasts contended, and the medal was awarded to Geo. Brosius. Mr. Denier was to go to Racine, Wis., on Aug. 26th, to give two rope ascensions.

MR. AND MRS. W. CHRISTIE MILLER AND W. F. OWEN, assisted by the Ilion Glee Club, gave a dramatic and musical entertainment at Mohawk, N. Y., Aug. 21st.

JAMES TAYLOR, vocalist, is announced ahead in Canada as follows:—Strathroy, Aug. 31st; St. Thomas, Sept. 1st; Ingersoll, Sept. 2d; Paris, Sept. 3d; Dundas, Sept. 4th; and thence to Toronto.

M. HARTZ opened in Toronto, Canada, on Aug. 26th, and was to go thence to Hamilton and London, for two nights each, and thence return to New York.

ALF. BURNETT is traveling through Canada. He was in Montreal and Three Rivers the past week, and was to go to Quebec for two nights.

THE ACADEMY OF MUSIC, Buffalo, N. Y., which has been closed, opens on Aug. 29th for the exhibition of McEvoy's panorama of a tour through the "Emerald Isle."

THE BRITTAINNETTA SISTERS, cornet soloists and double and single dancers, advertise that they can be engaged.

L. W. SEAVEY, the scenic artist, is painting the scenery for the new Opera House at Altoona, Pa.

MANAGERS who desire the services of the Avolas, gymnasts, are requested to address as per advertisement.

A PANORAMA is advertised for sale. See Costumer's card.

JEO. BOGAN'S address can be found among our advertisements.

THE SIAMESE TWINS, Fat Woman and Circassian Girl, exhibit in Huntingdon, Pa., on Sept. 2d.

J. H. PEABODY, late with Grau's German Opera and Norwood's Glit Concerts, is organizing a concert troupe, in which George Patterson will be the leading attraction. The company will start on or about the 15th of September.

DONALDSON'S COMBINATION showed in Sparta, Wis., Aug. 28th and 29th. Hank McGuffin is one of the proprietors. Mad. Worland and Miss Annie are with them. They are out for the fairs, with a lot of living curiosities in eight cages.

MAGICAL APPARATUS can be obtained of Nickle and Keating, whose address find in another column.

PROF. JENKINS is the name of a gentleman who has lately distinguished himself by crossing the Niagara river by riding a velocipede on a rope, thus imitating Blondin, who crossed the same river several years ago. This last exhibition took place on Aug. 25th, below Suspension Bridge. The rope was made of hemp and was two inches in circumference. It was stretched across the chasm, one thousand feet in length, and two hundred feet above the flood. The cable was fastened securely and immovably on the American shore, but on the Canada shore coiled around a windlass to facilitate tightening, and then twisted and tied around a couple of cedar stumps. The deflection of the rope was about thirty feet. The machine used by Jenkins is not a velocipede. It is, however, a bycycle, and turned upside down would resemble, in some degree, a modern velocipede. The wheels, three inches wide, are made heavy and of wood, without tires, but in their places are grooves one and three-quarter inches deep. The front wheel is three feet two inches and the hind wheel two feet ten inches in diameter. The connecting rods are iron, so also the balance pole, which is eight feet long and tipped with ten pound balls, and weighs twenty-eight pounds. The whole thing, with the man thrown in, weighs 298 pounds. The propelling power is a pinion cog-wheel, made of brass, about nine inches in diameter, which is made to gear to cogs which surround the front wheel at the bottom of the groove. At 2.30 o'clock the Professor made his appearance at the small house on the Canada side, with the pieces of his machine, and at once proceeded to put them together. With the aid of his men he first placed the fore wheel on the rope just at the edge of the precipice, and while one man balanced it, another placed on the standard from the under side, thus bringing two strong bars of iron on either side of the rope. All being in readiness, the bicycle was fastened by a rope to the bank, and Jenkins started for his hotel to robe, but made his second appearance at 3 30 o'clock, dressed for the performance. He wore white tights, black velvet knee breeches, shoulder straps and cross belts of the same material, and on his head was placed a crown shaped hat; and all were profusely bedecked with tinsel and beads. His feet were covered with buff moccasins. In a moment he grasped the handles of the pinion wheel and turned them, moving slowly from the bank, the crowd preserving a death-like stillness. He then returned, and waited five or ten minutes, and resumed his seat. Three pistol shots were then fired from the Canadian side, and it was a go. The machine moved slowly forward, the rope swaying gently from side to side until he had passed about fifty feet, when another opportunity was given the photograph artist to take his picture, after which he crawled along at a snail's pace to the middle of the span, where he raised and waved his hat, and received a faint cheer in response. From the centre to the American shore it was evident y hard work to propel the bicycle, but at last the edge of the cliff was reached, and the welkin did ring with the applause of the people. The time occupied in passing over the rope was just eleven minutes. The enormous crowd on both sides of the river was $130, of which the Elgin House gave $50. It was also agreed that half the receipts at the bridge should go to the performer. The expenses were about $1,000, the rope alone costing $350.

J. D. WYMAN, bill poster, Troy, N. Y., through an advertisement, states that he is still in existence and pasting bills as of yore.

HERMAN NESTROCK, theatrical shoemaker, inserts his card in another column.

A NEW HOUSE has just been completed in Yonkers, N. Y., and is advertised to rent.

JOHN THORNE, scenic artist, advertises that he is prepared to furnish scenery for halls and theatres. For further particulars read the advertisement.

WATT'S HALL, Selma, Ala., says our old Mobile correspondent, "Guy," writing under date of August 23d, "will not be recognized by old showmen when they pass through the south this winter, as a good many of them thought it was beyond redemption. Robert Harvey, of Boston, and late stage carpenter and machinist of Whitman's White Fawn Troupe, has so transformed it as to make it one of the neatest little houses for amusements in the south. He has completely torn out the inside of the old hall and put in a parquet and dress circle with a seating capacity of about 1,200. The proscenium will be of a light fanciful color, and the front of the dress circle will be embelished in white and gold. There will be seventeen sets of scenes and a pretty drop curtain. The scenic and fresco work will be executed by Mr. Thurren. It will be ready to open about the 1st of October."

JAMES TAYLOR, the London vocalist, is advertised ahead as follows:—St. Mary's, Aug. 31st; London, 1st; Strathroy, 2d; Ingersoll, 3d, and Dundas, 4th, all in Canada.

KNOX, the original Fakir of Bramah, closed a tour of the towns in Cape Cod at Provincetown, Aug. 19th. On Aug. 21st he was at West Danvers, Mass.; Topsfield, 23d, and Hampton, 24th. He is running a girl show, with Chas. H. Dearborn as business manager, and Chas. T. Atwood, advertising agent.

REED, the spiritual medium, did not meet with very good success in Cape Cod towns. He was very roughly handled at Hyanis on account of his not being willing to have hand-cuffs placed on his wrists by a blacksmith of Hyanis. He left Hyanis in disgust. Rufus Somerby was his manager.

THE ELLINGER AND FOOTE COMBINATION were in Montreal, Canada, on Aug. 26th and 27th.

NED BUNTLINE lectured in Des Moines, Iowa, on Aug. 24th, on Mormonism.

ROBERT NICKLE opens for three weeks at Fox's American Theatre, Phila., on Sept. 27th. He plays for eight weeks with Frank Rivers in Pennsylvania.

UNCLE FRANK BROWN, the well known Ethiopian comedian, who has retired from the more active duties of a showman, and who has settled down in Philadelphia, where he keeps a place frequented by all the show boys in the Quaker City, has a card in another column, to which the attention of the reader is called.

Amateur.

AMATEUR THEATRICALS IN PHILADELPHIA.—A correspondent writing from the "City of Brotherly Love" furnishes us with the following concerning the doings of amateur theatrical companies in that city. He says:—"The different amateur associations of our city are making every effort to surpass their former endeavors in the theatrical line, and intend to start out with renewed vigor and energy for the coming season of 1869 and '70. The Shakespeare have had their neat little temple overhauled and renovated—new carpets laid, new papering, and new fixings throughout. They present as their initial effort the play of 'Meg's Diversion,' with the farce of 'Sudden Thoughts.' Mr. Bartram, a useful member of this organization, was suddenly taken ill with hemorrage of the lungs lately, and now lies in a critical condition. The association can ill spare him, as he is an excellent 'old man,' and a genial gentleman outside of the 'biz.' Mr. Cumber remains, and will assume the 'heavies.' The Shakespeare opens on September 2d.....The Boothenian, so I am informed by one of their members, intend to alter their place completely, and will use every means to do away with the errors of the past, and reclaim themselves hereafter. They should see that better order is kept both before and behind the curtain. They have not settled upon any date as yet when to open, but calculate that it will be about the middle of September.....The Wheatley re-open on September 1st, and commence their fall and winter campaign with 'Charles the Second' and 'Momentous Question.' This organization, which has been very successful in the past, has a large roll of members, and good accommodations for an audience to witness their representations. I am sorry to record the absence of several of their best amateur talent, who have left them, and it will be hard to fill the vacancies caused by their withdrawal. Among those who have ceased to 'strut their brief hour' are Harry Thomas, a good performer; John Brooks, a clever and versatile actor; D. Herman, a rising aspirant for histrionic fame; A. F. McCollin, a finished scholar and amateur; E. E. Hulfish, Jr., whose talents as a comedian are good, and who ranks as the best we have had here for many years; Joseph Burns, a valuable member, and who represented the 'old men;' V. Marshal, an excellent scenic artist, and Miss Devere, a lively and enthusiastic lady of the 'chambermaid' persuasion. The persons I have mention d were prominent lights in the dramatic halo of Thespian glory, and but few, if any, of the old regime still exist. They promise, however, a brilliant season, and we must wait patiently until the opening to see if they are capable of fulfilling it at the commencement, as that is a sure index of what is to follow.....The Davenport has ceased to exist—the warm weather causing a collapse in that quarter, and it may be classed as among the things that were."

Foreign Show News.

OUR LATEST LONDON SHOW INTELLIGENCE is up to Aug. 16th, and is as follows:—Notwithstanding the season of the year is not very favorable for the metropolitan theatres, the managers are constantly producing novelty, and all that are open appear to be doing a pretty fair business. Drury Lane is in possession of Bouicault's "Formosa," which is pronounced so decided a success that it is set down for a run up to the commencement of the pantomime season, on Christmas. An exchange says:—"There has been some demurring to the picture of University life presented in the career of dissipation exhibited by the 'stroke' of the Oxford eight immediately previous to the match; but it is absurd to quarrel with a dramatist for making his plot subservient to the purposes of stage illusion. The piece must be taken for what it professes to be, and, estimated by the amount of gratification 'Formosa' affords the audience, the new Drury drama comes up to a sufficiently high standard."....The Haymarket opened on Aug. 7th for a single performance of "The Lady of Lyons" and a couple of farces.....No change has taken place at the Adelphi where a summer audience was drawn to Mr. Anson's benefit; nor at the Gaiety, Queen's, Olympic, Strand, Prince of Wal s', Charing Cross, Alexandra, Grecian or Victoria Theatres.....Miss Oliver's benefit at the New Royalty, on Aug. 9th, was a great success. It was followed by the production of a new farce the following evening.....Sadler's Wells opened on Aug. 9th, for an amateur performance.....At the Pavilion Mr. D'Auban's facetious ballet is popular..... The drama, "Cast Away," has been revived at the Britannia, with Miss Ross as the heroine. "Luck" has concluded the performances. On Aug. 11th, "Alexander the Great" was represented.....The last performance of Harry Sullivan's first season at the Holborn was given on Aug. 7.....Professor Risley's imperial Japanese troupe of jugglers commenced a short engagement at the Surrey Theatre on Aug. 7th. Their feats comprise balancing, tight rope performances, top spinning, juggling, &c. Little "All Right" is, as usual, the great curiosity and wonder of a really curious and wonderful entertainment. The performance, which is divided into two parts, appears to give general satisfaction.....Moore and Crocker's Christy's Minstrels commence their fifth annual engagement, at the Standard, on Aug. 9th, with G. W. Moore as bones. S. S. Purdy and Neise Seymour are in the company.....Under the Gaslight" has been revived at the Alfred Theatre.....After an absence from the New East London Theatre of several months, Mr. Abrahams returned with his company on Aug. 9th, opening in Sower's drama of "A Quarter of a Million."....Mr. George Belmore had no sooner completed his engagement at the Theatre Royal, Margate, than the united proprietors, Miss Sarah Thorne, announced the appearance of the eminent tragedian, Mr. Creswick. He appeared on Aug. 9th in the character of Claude Melnotte in "The Lady of Lyons," and drew forth the plaudits of a crowded house, while Miss Sarah Thorne as Pauline was not less successful in her impersonation of the injured heroine.... The Strand is to be especially noted at this time for the continuous roar of merriment which pervades the house from the rising of the curtain till its fall. As soon as the American comedian, John S. Clarke, presents himself in John Brougham's whimsical farcical comedy entitled "Among the Breakers," the fun begins, and it experiences no cessation till the burlesque of "Joan of Arc" (which had reached its one hundred and twenty-first night on Aug. 18) has reached its termination. An exchange says:—"The acting of Mr. John S. Clarke in "The Toodles" is so remarkably good that it should be seen by all who have the true relish of humor and the proper appreciation of thoroughly artistic drollery. That the actor is repeatedly called before the curtain during the performance is but a faint indication of the triumph achieved. Whether regarded as a certain cure for hypochondria, or looked upon as a glorious revival of those marvels of mirth wrought by Munden and Liston in the days of yore, the embodiment of Toodles by Mr. Clarke is something to be enjoyed and remembered....."

MADAME DE MERIC-LABLACHE has signed an engagement for the Italian Theatre, San Carlos, at Lisbon, for next winter.

HERR WAGNER'S "Meistersinger" is definitely accepted for the Berlin opera, and will be brought out at the end of October, with Herr Niemann as Walter, Mlle. Mallinger as Eva, and Mlle. Brandt as Madelaine. As a set off against this triumph, a parody of the same opera is having great success at Mayence, the piece is called "Les Maitres Chanteurs, ou Qui Sutsimme en Musique," and its chief characters are Richard Demence, Felix Mendel-boum, Meyerbach and Offenbein.

WASH NORTON'S CHRISTY MINSTRELS arrived in Buenos Ayres on July 5th, and were to open at the Franco Argentine Theatre on July 13th. The pictorial printing of this troupe is attracting considerable attention wherever they go.

MLLE. TAMANTI, who was the vocal teacher of Queen Louisa, of Prussia, has just died at Potsdam, in her 100th year.

MISS ANNA HOWELL,

The charming Lyric and Burlesque Actress and Comedienne, is now ready to negotiate with managers. Her repertoire will embrace all of the latest burlesques, comedies and songs. Large painted posters, streamers, photographs, &c., &c.

Managers wishing to secure the services of the above named talented young lady, for six or twelve nights, for the coming season will address her only authorized agent, F. B. LODER,
P. O. Box 845, New Orleans, La.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.—New Orleans Republican, Aug. 1868.—"Miss Anna Howell is undoubtedly an accomplished and thorough vocalist and musician, her voice being powerful, under good control, and very sweet. Her singing last night was rapturously applauded and encored three times in succession before the delighted audience would be satisfied. Commercial Bulletin, July, 1867.—Miss Howell appeared to have scarcely lived through sixteen summers. For one so young, she achieved wonders, and the careful and accurate manner in which she rendered her part was the theme of favorable comment. New Orleans Times, Jan. 1869.—Miss Anna Howell's humorous recitations were capitally delivered, and were warmly applauded. They revealed an unusual power of depicting humor. 11-12.*
